

School budget arouses loud protest

Citizens throng budget meeting

STROUDSBURG — Stroudsburg School District residents turned out by the hundreds Wednesday night generally to protest a huge proposed increase in real estate taxes and cutbacks in educational programs.

By their reactions, some 400 people who attended an open policy meeting of the Stroudsburg Area School Board appeared to differ on how to cut a proposed real estate tax increase of 25 mills, suggesting the board cut everything from salaries to athletics.

Many of the more than 30 people who addressed the board said the proposed tax increase is too high. Residents complained the recession has cut their earnings enough, and listed new homeowners and the elderly as the hardest hit.

One retired man, shouting down school board president Lloyd Manter, said a number of times, "We are on a set fee. Where is the money coming in for us retired people?"

"Before we go too far," cautioned Manter, "the board has not committed itself to a 25-mill increase."

"Why wasn't this put on a referendum?" the man asked. "Why did this come up after elections and not before? Whatever your proposal is, we still have no say in it. You are voting my money down the drain," he concluded to a burst of applause.

Other residents questioned why that large of a tax increase is necessary and why can't the board spread it out over a few years.

Board member Donald Stone said they expected to collect $184,707 more in taxes than they did this year. Federal subsidies are down, a cash balance of $269,000 the board began the school year with is gone and transportation costs have increased.

While Stone explained that recession knocked the bottom out of tax collection, residents asked how the board expects to improve tax collections by hiking taxes.

Stone answered the board is not counting on a high collection rate next year.

Responding to a question from Stroudsburg teacher Gabriel Kolcun, Stone said only 10 per cent of the budget increase is for additional spending. Most of the tax increase is needed to cover lost tax revenues, he said.

He said the only alternatives to drastically increasing real estate taxes are enacting a $10 right to work tax and doubling the occupational assessment tax. He added the board is seriously considering enacting the right to work tax for next year.

Dissatisfied residents suggested administrators and teachers cut or limit their salaries as ways to trim the proposed $5.9 million budget for 1975-76.

Some wanted "frills" like art and foreign language teachers laid off, others felt athletic programs should be sacrificed to keep art and language programs.

A minority said they want higher taxes rather than see the educational program decay.

Deborah Hankins, a Stroudsburg High School junior, asked the board to spare calculus and other advanced courses, stating without them some students will not be accepted into colleges. She advocated cutting back sports.

Board president Manter said directors will consider all ideas advanced Wednesday when it comes to cutting the budget. He scheduled a second policy meeting for 7:30 p.m. Tuesday to hear concrete suggestions by residents on how to cut the budget.

But before Manter made the announcement, district resident Peter Nevins asked the board if the public will see directors make the actual cuts.

Manter said he personally felt the public had a right to see what board members' priorities are, but added prior discussion, as long as no action is taken, should be private.

Wednesday's session was the first policy meeting of the board the public has been allowed to attend.

Most board members sat grim-faced through three and a half hours of questioning and criticism by residents.

At one point one large man, dressed in work clothes, bolted to his feet and shouted at the board, "You don't tell us what to do. We tell you guys what to do."

Founder on parochial school aid

State 'no-tax' budget talks die

HARRISBURG (UPI) — A fragile budget compromise that promised no new taxes was shattered Wednesday because of a dispute among House Democrats over aid to Pennsylvania's parochial schools.

Rep. Martin Mullen, D-Philadelphia, balked at a plan by Democrat leaders to use $169 million in a defunct nonpublic school aid program to balance the $4.7 billion state budget package.

Mullen's opposition, which was backed by at least 40 of the House's 114 Democrats, had the immediate effect of delaying a House vote on the proposed budget.

It also revealed a split in the Democratic caucus over House Speaker Herbert Fineman's plan to get a 12-month budget that spares the General Assembly from raising taxes.

Fineman, D-Philadelphia, had an agreement with key Senate leaders and Gov. Milton J. Shapp to move quickly on his proposed budget before pressure built on rank-and-file members to increase spending.

However, the Fineman plan — and virtually every plan presented to the legislature — requires use of $169 million in the Parent Reimbursement Fund, an aid program for parents with children in non-public schools.

It was declared unconstitutional last year by the U.S. Supreme Court but a group of parents have filed suit in federal court seeking release of the money for the two years before the law was overturned. A hearing is set for this summer.

"He took that money and used it for his pet projects," Mullen said. "He can't do that. That is a trust fund and the money was promised to the parents."

Fineman said that if the court rules in the parents' favor, the state would have to pay them the $119 million they are seeking. He also promised Mullen that House leaders would try to devise a new program to aid parochial schools.

"We want cash, not a promise," Mullen said. "They promise to get a new program, but they don't leave any money for it."

Fineman said if his plan falls through because of opposition from Mullen it will mean new taxes.

"He's closing his eyes to reality," Fineman said. "He wants to take that money out of the budget, but there's no conceivable way we can cut anymore. We've already cut $170 million from the governor's request."

In a test vote taken in caucus over the use of the fund, Mullen said he had the support of 35 of the Democrats present. Democrat leaders put the figure in the low 30's.

However, even that number

Senate a 52-42 target

Defense limit shot down

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate Wednesday defeated efforts by liberals to put a $23.8 billion ceiling on spending for new weapons and to reject a program to increase the accuracy of the nation's atomic missiles.

By a vote of 52 to 42, the senators rejected arguments that a bill authorizing $110 million for research on improved accuracy and power of five weapons systems might bring a destructive war closer.

Earlier, it easily defeated an attempt to cut $1.2 billion from the $25 billion weapons and research procurement bill.

Sen. J. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., advocating the program for improved missile accuracy, summed up for its supporters in a simple analogy:

"If a man buys a rifle to go out there and shoot game, he wants the most accurate gun he can get. If the United States goes out and buys missiles, they ought to have the same thing."

Sen. Thomas J. McIntyre, D-N.H., opposing it, said "These programs run counter to our national security because they put a hair trigger on nuclear war and will draw Soviet fire by giving them an incentive to strike first in a period of crisis."

The debate, after a long closed-session discussion of top secret Pentagon strategies, indicated the new accuracy program was designed to perfect a guidance system to enable a missile to fly from the United States to within 300 feet of its target. Current accuracy apparently is within 900 feet.

"It doesn't make any difference," said Sen. John O. Pastore, D-R.I., an opponent of counterforce. "If you drop a two-megaton bomb on this Capitol plaza, you won't be able to find the White House."

Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., said the United States could not afford to give Russia the opportunity to have greater accuracy.

The senators voted down opposition to the accuracy program after liberals attempted to push through the cut in funds for weapons procurement.

The Senate defeated the effort on a roll call vote of 59 to 36 after a spirited debate during which 34-year-old Sen.

Sam Nunn, D-Ga., vigorously challenged 73-year-old Sen. Stuart Symington, D-Mo., a former Air Force secretary, who had proposed the across-the-board cut.

"The United States has a history of cutting defense too much after war," said Nunn, who was born just before World War II.

WEST POINT, N.Y. (UPI) — President Ford promised applauding U.S. Military Academy graduates Wednesday he would fight to keep the United States a first class military power and to stop Congress from cutting defense spending.

Ford, Vice President Nelson A. Rockefeller and Defense Secretary James Schlesinger stressed the same theme — the need for U.S. military might to offset a continuing Soviet threat — in simultaneous commencement speeches at the three major military academies.

Ford delivered his speech to a cheering audience of 20,000 at

Doctors' crisis spreading

By United Press International
Hundreds of New York City and Philadelphia doctors, angry at booming malpractice insurance costs, refused to treat non-emergency cases for the fourth day Wednesday.

In Rhode Island, state officials attempted to work out a solution to hold down insurance premiums and stop a threatened doctors' strike.

In New York City, public hospitals—which are responsible rather than the doctors in malpractice cases — reported the first significant increases in patient loads and ambulance runs since the start of the doctor's protest.

A spokesman for the city's Health and Hospitals Corp., which administers the 19 municipal hospitals, said spot checks disclosed the increases were most apparent in Queens and Brooklyn where the doctors' strike has been the strongest.

Gov. Hugh Carey met Wednesday with representatives of the 27,500-member State Medical Society to discuss the slowdown.

Residents blast middle school

STROUDSBURG — The open space Stroudsburg Middle School was criticized as being costly to maintain and too noisy for students by a half-dozen Stroudsburg Area School District residents Wednesday night.

Middle School Director Paul Harakal promptly said the school saved taxpayers $1.5 million because it has no walls between classrooms. He defended the program as successful amid vocal criticism by parents who claimed their children cannot cope with the noise and other problems.

Discussions of the round, single-story school on Chipperfield Drive in Stroud Township punctuated a Stroudsburg Area School Board policy meeting designed to let residents tell the board how they want a proposed 1975-76 budget of $5.9 million cut.

One man criticized administrators for trying to cut teachers from a budget to save money while wasting it by burning lights excessively at the middle school.

Harakal countered that burning all lights saves more money than re-rigging lights so every other one is lit.

The resident, who said he was retired, said administrators could cut operational costs of the school by two-thirds if the school had been built in the traditional way, with stairs and separate floors.

By not building interior walls, district taxpayers saved $1.5 million dollars on a $4,238,958, Harakal proclaimed. The average cost per student of middle schools in Pennsylvania is $3,485, while at Stroudsburg's school it was $2,420, he said.

Two other parents with children in the middle school complained their children are learning less this year than they did in traditional, four-walled classrooms.

One mother said even middle school teachers privately admit they cannot stand the noise of children in one large room.

Why didn't directors study these problems in other open-space schools before building this one? She asked.

Wednesday was the third school board-related meeting at which district residents attacked the middle school, which just completed its first year in service.

Congress fails to override veto

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The House failed by five votes Wednesday to override President Ford's veto of a bill which Democrats claimed would have put 900,000 people to work.

The result was close, but it showed Ford need not fear having to take directions from a Congress top-heavy with Democratic majorities.

The vote to override the veto was 277 to 145, five votes short of the two-thirds majority required by the Constitution to enact a bill over a presidential veto.

The measure would have provided $5.3 billion to enable 13 federal agencies to increase anti-recession spending, chiefly on construction jobs; to fund 840,000 summer jobs for young people; to increase public service employment, and to help Detroit by buying 21,000 new cars for the government's use.

In vetoing it last week, Ford said the impact of the spending would not be felt until "long after our current unemployment problems are expected to subside."

Instead, the administration backed a $2 billion bill for summer jobs and public service employment.

A brief glimmer of Camelot — Caroline grows up

"Don't let it be forgot, that once there was a spot, for one brief shining moment that was known as Camelot."

By BERNARD CAUGHEY

CONCORD, Mass. (UPI) — John F. Kennedy would have loved it. It would have been his day—one of those "brief shining moments" known as Camelot.

Seventeen-year-old Caroline, his first-born and only daughter, graduates today from Concord Academy in this Boston suburb. She plans to enter Radcliffe College in the fall.

And, but for that sniper's bullet which took his life on Nov. 22, 1963, in Dallas, Kennedy would be 58 and patriarch of the Kennedy Clan. But Caroline Kennedy—17?

Impossible!

For Americans who still believe in the Kennedy mystique, it seems absolutely incredible for Caroline to be a teen-ager, graduating from a preparatory school.

For some, Caroline forever will be that curly haired 6-year-old child who knelt next to her beautiful, grieving mother in the Capitol's rotunda. And, as the young widow kissed the flag covering the casket, Caroline reached under it to touch her father's coffin.

For others, Caroline will be frozen in time, as Cardinal Richard Cushing said the funeral mass and Caroline looked up to see Jacqueline's tear-streaked face. The small hand clutched her mother's and she said, "You'll be all right, Mummy. Don't cry. I'll take care of you."

But it was the First Family of the early 1960s and the pictures we'll never forget. Those of:

—Caroline teetering into a White House news conference in her mother's shoes.

—Caroline wandering into the press lobby telling newsmen her father was "sitting upstairs with his shoes and socks off not doing anything."

—Caroline wearing an orange life jacket sailing off Hyannis Port, braced between her mother's knees, with her father at the tiller.

—Caroline coming out of church clutching a large rag doll.

—Her pony Macaroni hauling a two-wheel cart around the White House grounds and the Kennedy weekend retreat Glen Ora in Virginia. In the cart would be Jacqueline, Caroline and maybe some other children.

—Caroline and John bursting into their father's bedroom and turning television on full blast so they could watch cartoons while he had breakfast and did early morning reading.

At the end of the day, Kennedy often would open the French windows leading to the White House's Rose Garden. He would clap his hands and Caroline and John would come bounding to him.

He'd make up stories about Caroline hunting with hounds and winning the Grand National.

And, he'd weave other stories about Bobo the Lobo, a giant; and Maybelle, a girl who lived in the woods; and about The Black Shark and The White Shark.

We also learned that during his intensive campaigning, when he had little time to spend with his family, Caroline learned her first word: it was "plane."

Secretary of Defense Robert McNamara often told of the time Kennedy met Caroline just before dinner time during the height of the Cuban crisis. "Caroline, have you been eating candy?" he asked. When ignored, he repeated the question. Ignored the second time, he sternly asked: "Caroline, answer me. Have you been eating candy— yes, no or maybe?"

Kennedy often said "life is unfair."

And so it was.

For, among other things, it cheated him out of the joy of today.

But the words of his undelivered speech, prepared for Dallas a dozen years ago, can serve as the theme for Caroline and the other 78 graduates of Concord Academy. In that speech he said:

"Only an America which has fully educated its citizens is fully capable of tackling the complex problems and perceiving the hidden dangers of the world in which we live."

Israelis out, Suez open

By United Press International
Israel completed withdrawal of half its troops and most of its weapons from the Sinai Desert frontlines a day ahead of schedule Wednesday and said it expects Egypt to reciprocate by allowing Israeli cargo to transit the Suez Canal.

The Suez Canal is due to reopen today to international shipping for the first time since the 1967 Middle East war. Egyptian President Anwar Sadat has said he would be aboard the first ship making the transit.

Israeli Defense Minister Shimon Peres said the thinning out of armed forces and firepower in the Sinai which began on Tuesday was completed on Wednesday. The move was designed as a unilateral goodwill action timed to coincide with the canal opening.

Peres said there was a fair chance of settlement of the Middle East crisis if Egypt showed a willingness to compromise as well as negotiate.

Secretary of State Henry Kissinger, returning on President Ford's flight from Europe to Washington, said "conditions exist in which there could be progress" in the Middle East, but he added, "I'm not saying there is going to be progress."

Foreign Minister Yigal Allon, speaking to the parliament in Jerusalem, said that while Israel welcomed the reopening of the canal, it expected something in return from Egypt for the Israeli withdrawal.

"It was not without cost on the part of Israel or an empty gesture," Allon said of the withdrawal decision. "But it was worth taking the risk."

"We hope that the government of Egypt will know how to appreciate our recent move and will not be tempted to take any measures which would force us, contrary to our intentions, to retreat..."

"I would emphasize that it is our full right to expect with the renewal of international navigation in the canal, the full freedom of passage for our cargoes will also materialize," Allon said.

Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin announced the thinning out of its frontline forces in Sinai on Monday while President Ford and Sadat were meeting in Salzburg, Austria.

Sadat welcomed the Israeli announcement as a possible step toward peace in the Middle East. A senior American official with the Kissinger party said Ford's meeting with Sadat was "very positive."

Ford said he would offer a Mideast peace plan at the end of June or early July following talks in Washington with Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin.

The Israeli withdrawal involved pulling back half of its 7,000 troops, 15 of its 30 tanks, all of its 36 artillery pieces and all anti-aircraft missiles from the limited forces zone on the frontline. The limited forces zone was established by the first Egyptian-Israeli troop disengagement accord signed in January 1974.

Reduction in numbers

Viets out U.S. newsmen

SAIGON (UPI) — South Vietnam's Provisional Revolutionary Government has ordered three American news correspondents to leave the country Thursday.

A representative of the PRG told Paul Vogle and Chad Huntley of United Press International and Associated Press bureau chief George Esper Tuesday they would have to leave by chartered plane for Vientiane, Laos. He said in each case the expulsion was to reduce the number of foreign correspondents in Vietnam.

Reports reaching Saigon, meanwhile, said eight Americans and four other foreigners captured during the first attack of the Communist offensive last March are all alive and well under detention in the Central Highlands.

The Communists currently are not issuing entry visas to Saigon for foreigners. Last week they expelled Associated Press correspondent for producing news copy and photographs they said went against the Communist revolution.

Vogle, who speaks fluent Vietnamese and has lived in the country since 1956, had been attempting to marry his long-time fiancée when the expulsion order was issued. He asked PRG officials for time to put his affairs in order but the request was denied.

The PRG made no reference to the work of Vogle, Huntley and Esper since the Communists seized control April 30.

The expulsion order leaves only three American news persons in Saigon — Alan Dawson, Frances Starner of the AP and Dan Rodill, who has submitted material to the Columbia Broadcasting System and the Long Island, N.Y., newspaper Newsday.

The reports from the Central Highlands identified the Americans in detention as Jay Scarborough, a student; Paul Struharik, U.S. provincial representative in Ban Me Thuot; missionaries John and Carolyn Miller and their 6-year-old daughter, Luanne; and Richard and Lillian Phillips and Betty Mitchell.

Death ordered for dad in son's candy killing

HOUSTON (UPI) — A jury Wednesday sentenced Ronald Clark O'Bryan to die in the electric chair for killing his eight-year-old son with poisoned Halloween candy.

The 10-man, 2-woman jury deliberated one hour and 11 minutes before returning their unanimous verdict.

The panel answered affirmatively two questions—whether O'Bryan's murder of his son was deliberate and intentional and whether O'Bryan poses a continued threat to society.

The death penalty is mandatory if both questions are answered affirmatively.

"Stand up please," District Judge Frank C. Price told O'Bryan.

O'Bryan, 30, with his two attorneys, stood facing the judge, his hands folded in front of him. Price reread the jury's punishment, then looked at O'Bryan.

"I assess your punishment as death in the electric chair," Price said.

O'Bryan, an optician, showed no emotion.

O'Bryan was convicted Tuesday of the Oct. 31, 1974 murder of his son, Timothy Mark. The state claimed O'Bryan, saddled by mounting debts, placed cyanide granules in candy straws and fed them to his son as a bedtime treat after a Halloween outing.

Prosecutors called in psychiatric experts to testify at the penalty phase of the trial that O'Bryan was a threat to society and capable of future acts of violence.

Britons vote on market

LONDON (UPI) — Britain's Common Market referendum battle ended Wednesday with pro-Market leaders predicting economic disaster if the nation votes to pull out of the nine-nation European Economic Community and opponents claiming public sympathy is swinging their way.

Prime Minister Harold Wilson has called on Britain's 40 million voters to say "Yes" or "No" in a national referendum today to the question: "Do you think the United Kingdom should stay in the European Community (Common Market)?"

"If the 'Noes' win, Britain will wake Monday morning in a state of economic confusion and danger," said Home Secretary Roy Jenkins, leader of the campaign to keep Britain in the Market.

CIA plots no trifle: Senator

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. Frank Church, chairman of the Senate's CIA investigation, said Wednesday he has "hard evidence" of CIA involvement in murder plots and it was no trifling matter as the Rockefeller Commission has suggested.

In two statements during the day, Church, D-Idaho, took the presidential commission's chairman, Vice President Nelson A. Rockefeller, sharply to task for statements Monday in which he said the agency had made mistakes but they were not major ones.

In his later statement, following an afternoon closed-door meeting of his committee with Central Intelligence Agency director William E. Colby, Church reiterated:

"I have said we have hard evidence that the CIA was involved in assassination plots. I regard this as a very serious matter. I personally believe there should be a full disclosure."

He added: "I prefer the simpler, clearer term murder." Church refused to say whether any plots had been successful. But he did say the evidence had no direct connection with the assassination of President John F. Kennedy, although the panel will look into reports the CIA and perhaps other spy agencies may have withheld information from the Warren Commission.

Church said the Senate committee in coming days would call back Colby for a fifth questioning session, as well as former CIA directors John McCone and Richard Helms and other past and present CIA officials.

House extends, broadens landmark voting rights act

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The House Wednesday approved a 10-year extension of the landmark 1965 Voting Rights Act with new features to give other minorities the same protections blacks received under the original measure.

Final approval came on a roll call vote of 341 to 70 after the House killed a Republican effort to recommit the bill to committee with instructions to delete the sections extending voting rights protections — including bilingual assistance at the polls — to Spanish-Americans and other minorities.

The bill went to the Senate, where it faces stiff opposition from southern Democrats.

Republicans, and some Democrats, made numerous unsuccessful efforts to strike out major sections of the bill, particularly elements of its extension to new groups of voters.

Considered by many the most effective civil rights legislation ever passed, Congress enacted the law in 1965 to deal with discriminatory voting practices against blacks in the South and elsewhere, and to ban the use of literacy tests.

New York City short on payroll

NEW YORK — New York City is more than $43 million short of meeting its $88.1 million payroll on Friday, cash projections by the comptroller's office showed Wednesday. The payroll is among $132.9 million in payments due that day and according to the projections the city will not have enough money to meet them. The city had thought it could depend on $170 million in committed prepayments of real estate taxes. However, a city law prevents Mayor Abraham Beame from signing a law authorizing the deposit of those monies until Friday.

U.S. should stay pat on Israel

WASHINGTON — The United States should tell the non-aligned nations now it will cut off its contributions to the United Nations and end its participation in the General Assembly if Israel is expelled, U.N. Ambassador-nominee Daniel Patrick Moynihan said Wednesday. Moynihan told the Senate Foreign Relations Committee the United States should publicly declare its policy position now so that non-aligned nations would know in advance what repercussions to expect if they press ahead with moves to expel Israel.

New car sales take jump

DETROIT — New car sales in May were the best since last October for the slumping U.S. auto industry but still 21 per cent below the energy crisis-depressed 1974 level, the four U.S. automakers reported Wednesday. Industry executives claimed a 17 per cent jump over April sales, twice the usual average, indicated a summer sales surge might be in the offing. Their traditional spring upturn never materialized. Imports, which have been claiming better than one of every five sales so far this year sold an estimated 135,000 cars, up 17 per cent in May over last year.

Spelling bee nears end

WASHINGTON — Thirty-two youngsters survived words like "euthanasia" and "duodenal" Wednesday to emerge as finalists in the 48th national spelling bee. Forty-seven other boys and girls, all under 14, fell by the wayside during the day's six rounds of competition which took five hours and 400 words. The finalists resume competition today, when a winner will collect a $1,000 check for superior spelling. The bee is sponsored by Scripps-Howard newspapers and 61 other newspapers.

Gas tax support urged

WASHINGTON — House Democratic Leader Thomas P. O'Neill, D-Mass., urged his party colleagues Wednesday to show their "guts" by supporting a gasoline tax increase. A Republican told fellow GOP members that Democrats have become desperate for an energy program — any energy program. Party caucuses Wednesday set the scene for next week's House debate on an energy tax bill that would raise the federal gasoline tax, tax business use of energy, limit oil imports and reward conservation and fuel switching.

Finland's government resigns

HELSINKI — Finland's coalition government resigned Wednesday under the pressure of a 17 per cent annual inflation rate and a four-fold increase in the country's trade deficit. The four-party coalition headed by Premier Kalevi Sorsa, a Social Democrat, agreed to President Urho K. Kekkonen's request that it continue in a caretaker capacity until a new government is formed — Finland's 57th in 58 years of independence. At a special presidential council meeting, Kekkonen told Sorsa he would call parliamentary elections September 21-22.

Delta Queen loses crown

NEW ORLEANS — The red-and-white paddleboat Natchez, tooting its whistle to thousands of cheering hometown fans lining both sides of the Mississippi River, soundly defeated the Delta Queen of Cincinnati Wednesday. "Mark Twain would have loved it," said a jubilant Capt. Doc Hawley after piloting the new Natchez to victory in the first steamboat race on the lower Mississippi in 105 years. Several thousand persons lined the sunny banks of the river on both sides for seven miles.

Ex-Lehigh official took funds

PHILADELPHIA — Richard I. Miller, 44, former Lehigh County courthouse superintendent, testified at the kickback trial of his predecessor Wednesday that they received cash kickbacks from Class Janitor Supply of Allentown. Miller told a jury of nine men and three women that he lied before a federal grand jury here last October when he said he never received kickbacks from the firm on purchases of cleaning supplies. Miller's testimony came in the trial of John C. Shumberger, whom he succeeded as superintendent after the defendant resigned his post in June, 1970. He told the federal court jury that while he was an assistant to Shumberger, there was "excessive buying" of cleaning supplies at the courthouse. The supplies were needed at first he testified, but then "it got out of hand."

C-Hill resident requests lower density

By DEBORAH ENYEART
Pocono Record Reporter
BRODHEADSVILLE — A Brodheadsville man protested a new land development in Chestnut Hill Township Tuesday night but was told supervisors would have to approve the plans if they are legally correct.

Rudy Blatt claimed Country-side, a 161-lot development a half mile north of Brodheadsville on Rt. 115, would be a "death sentence for Brodheadsville."

He asked the supervisors if it would be possible to pass an ordinance to limit the size of lots around the borough to not less than 10 acres.

Solicitor Lester Brown told Blatt that what he was really asking for was zoning, which the township doesn't have.

He added he would have to advise the supervisors to approve plans for the development if the developer has met all township ordinance and state requirements.

Blatt said the development would "create chaos," put a burden on police and firemen and possibly create health, garbage and traffic problems.

"All of this would be on top of the Brodheadsville we know today. The developers sell a number of lots, make money and get out. We, who live here, get the mess," he said.

"We can forget Brodheadsville the way we know it today if the plans are approved and lots are sold," Blatt continued.

Allen Conklin, chairman of the township planning commission, told Blatt that any changes to the subdivision ordinance must be justified.

"We can't say not to subdivide because we don't like it. It must be detrimental to the health and welfare of the people," he said.

Conklin added that many considerations are given to developments, such as soil, profiles, properly installed roads at required widths and locations of sewage systems and wells.

Blatt told the supervisors that he was not concerned about his own property but about the town.

"These people (non-residents who buy lots) can't be troubled because they don't care about the township," he claimed.

"Probably what I'm asking is wishful thinking, but couldn't lot sizes be limited to a minimum of 10 acres within a three mile radius of Brodheadsville?" Blatt asked.

Brown said what Blatt was proposing could be done under a comprehensive zoning plan, but the supervisors couldn't start "spot zoning."

Later in the meeting, Bob Storm of Lawrence R. Bailey Inc., a Stroudsburg surveying firm, presented the supervisors with plans for the development.

The supervisors refused to approve the plans, however, until corrections could be made on open land and draining.

They also questioned the design of a road opening onto Rte. 115 and an accompanying culvert.

Burning ordinance proposed

BRODHEADSVILLE — Chestnut Hill Township Supervisors scheduled a special meeting Tuesday night to discuss a burning ordinance.

The special meeting will be held Wednesday, June 11 at the municipal building at 7 p.m.

The supervisors asked West End fire chief Bill Gethen Jr., to have an ordinance ready for the meeting.

Solicitor Lester Brown said they would be able to make changes in Gethen's proposals and needed "something to work from."

In other business, the supervisors enacted an ordinance changing street names of township roads.

Roads affected are Orchard Road, changed to Ziegler Road; Deer Lane, to Silver Valley Drive; Kennel Drive, to Silver Valley Drive; Silver Valley Drive, to Deer Lane; Township Road 420-01, to Storm Avenue; and Legislative Route 45085 from Routes 209 and 115 to the Hamilton Township line, to Greenview Drive.

The supervisors also enacted an ordinance that will prohibit the use and sale of firecrackers in the township.

The lone bid of $1,975 for a road sweeper from Loder and Sharp of Quakertown was also accepted.

A spokesman from the firm told the supervisors they would be loaned a sweeper at no cost until the newly-purchased item could be delivered.

Secretary Mrs. Nettie Romasavage announced she had township maps for sale for 50 cents.

Added land for airport?

Authority promotes industrial park

MOUNT POCONO: Ralph Reppert, executive director of Pocono Mountain Industries (PMI), told members of the Mount Pocono Airport Authority Tuesday, PMI is anxious to move ahead with development of the industrial park adjacent to the Pocono Mountain Municipal Airport.

Reppert said the closing on the 163 acres will be the latter part of next week. He noted all PMI needed was a resolution from Monroe County Commissioners accepting a site as a gift to the county.

Reppert asked members of the authority what land they would need as far as layout for runway expansion. He asked if the authority would need any of the industrial land for the extension of runway or road to the park and just what plans they had.

Authority members stated they feel more engineering information is needed in order to tie in with the industrial park.

At this point in time, authority members do not know just what route they will take — the acquisition of more land, right-of-way or easement.

It was agreed to have L. Robert Kimball, engineer for the authority, and the engineers for PMI meet and discuss just what will be needed.

Both parties agreed they want to move in the right direction as soon as possible since Reppert stated the need for the industrial park.

He told members in less than five years all of the land in Crowe Industrial Park has been sold. He noted there is a prospective company ready to move to the new industrial park.

Pocono Haven issue unresolved

Ban on lot sales extended

TANNERSVILLE — "It's still up in thin air," commented one of several Pocono Haven Development residents who have habitually attended Pocono Township Supervisors meetings to see if the developer has applied for a necessary bridge and dam permit.

Supervisors informed residents that they have neither heard from Richard Feinberg, the developer, nor his attorney since the May meeting. At that time, Feinberg's attorney, Phillip Williams, said efforts were underway to improve roads and obtain necessary permits.

John Moore, operations manager at Pocono Haven, said engineers for the developer were still in Harrisburg to get specifications from the state for bridge and road improvements.

Because Feinberg never applied for a township permit to construct a bridge and dam, supervisors have placed a ban on the sale of all lots.

According to solicitor Detlef Hansen, the ban on lot sales will stay in effect until Feinberg applies for the permits.

Supervisors have also delayed approval on Feinberg's revised plans for Pocono Haven, submitted in March, but the necessary time period in which supervisors can act has already elapsed. Feinberg now has a pocket approval of the plans.

For the past several months, development residents have complained to supervisors of an inadequate water system, half-completed homes and impassable roads in the development.

On most of the problems facing the residents, supervisors have said they could not use taxpayers money to settle a dispute over a contract involving private property.

In a related matter, Moore said he was informed of complaints concerning a "garbage problem" in the development.

He said the development had never been responsible for garbage disposal and that each individual home owner must pay for a collector to haul garbage.

One resident said a central trash bin had been used by residents and had not been cleaned for several months. Complaints had been referred to Jerry Thornton, township codes enforcement officer.

School tax hike in perspective

The rumbling over the dilemma posed by the Stroudsburg Area School District's budget troubles — cost versus quality — is but part of a larger malady spreading throughout the nation: the middle class is rebelling against ever higher costs for what they perceive as services to other people.

For example, in order to bring the Stroudsburg school budget down to a reasonable increase, some teaching positions will have to be cut, classes will be enlarged and some courses aimed at "special" children will have to be cut.

The middle class (from $6,000 to $15,000 a year income group) which foots most of the bill, says, in effect, "so what?" They perceive, and in some cases correctly, that their children won't be harmed by those cutbacks in programs and personnel.

Elsewhere, the same attitude is being expressed toward social welfare programs in jeopardy because of the tight economic pinch. If those programs sink, it is no skin off the nose of middle class workers — or so they think. After all, food stamps, welfare checks and uplift programs don't apply to them. In fact, it has become exactly that: "We" are tired of supporting "them".

(Along those lines, some waggish accountant at the Ford Motor Co. computed that there are some 87 million people "living off" some 71 million workers in the United States — conveniently forgetting to note that included in the larger number are government workers and military personnel, all of whom pay taxes and thus contribute to their own upkeep.)

This is all great fodder for political campaigns, but it ignores the plain fact that programs geared to the lower class families and "special" children (often a euphemism for handicapped) help take those people out of that category in future years and thus must eventually diminish the drain they represent on local, state and federal treasuries.

In Stroudsburg's case, a 25-mill tax increase is a bit extreme. But so are the cuts many are recommending be made to chop that increase.

As we wrote in this space last Saturday, the jarring tax hike proposal may just put an end to citizen apathy. We hope it does. But we also hope those who come out to object also come to listen. For, while dollars are important in this weak economy, so too are the benefits to be derived by the community at large from a good educational system.

In the total context of things, it isn't "us" against "them", but "us" against "ourselves". We are all of one neighborhood, and whenever we decide to let blight creep in, it downgrades the whole community, not just our little corner of it.

Why I-80 lights?

How many fatal accidents have there been on that stretch of Interstate Rte. 80 between Delaware Water Gap and the North Ninth Street ramp since the protective barrier was built last November?

None.

How many accidents resulting in injury have there been in that same stretch in the same time?

As far as our records show, two, neither serious.

So why is the state intent on stringing sodium vapor lamps along that seven-mile stretch of roadway? To cut down on the accident rate?

The fact is that the lights really aren't needed. Unless you count the electrical contractor who would get the job — he certainly could use the work, we imagine.

Not only is this an expense the admittedly broke Pennsylvania Department of Transportation could do without, it is an extravagant use of energy we should avoid.

Sodium vapor lamps do, indeed, use less power than many other types. But they still use power and at a time when the nation (and the world) is desperately seeking ways to conserve energy, such a project seems foolish in the extreme.

About all the good it would do is provide a glittering string of beads for airline passengers to eye, assuming they're not asleep. Which, incidentally, is what many residents fear they won't be if the lights are installed to glare into their bedroom windows.

With PennDOT secretary Jacob Kassab pleading poverty and bemoaning the sad state of state highways and highway bridges, this particular project seems to be one that should wind up on the shelf — indefinitely.

Pentagon's 'read letter days' turned up few spies

WASHINGTON — In outright violation of the law, military counterintelligence teams for years opened and read the mail of suspects.

This "flap and seal" operation, as it was called, rarely turned up any spies or criminals. It was used largely to snoop on servicemen who had complained about the Vietnam war.

Evidence that the Pentagon tampered with the mails has been offered to the select Senate committee which is investigating the excesses of the CIA, FBI and other government gumshoes.

The "flap and seal" term goes back to an earlier day when mail was surreptitiously steamed open and sealed again. But the Pentagon snoops pried into military mail by a more intricate technique called "rolling." Two prongs resembling knitting needles were used to slip letters from envelopes without breaking the flap seals.

Our sources told us, parenthetically, that the more resourceful Central Intelligence Agency has developed a machine that can read mail right through the envelopes. Electric waves penetrate the paper, scanning each layer and picking out the ink marks. Then the letter is reassembled electronically.

The counterintelligence teams, operating in strict secrecy, opened military mail both within the United States and at overseas bases. The practice was more blatant, however, outside the country.

"As soon as an American leaves the United States, the intelligence authorities think he

Jack Anderson
with Les Whitten

loses all his constitutional rights," said one source.

The snooping became so widespread, military sources told us, that letters stacked up faster than they could be read. Tapes of bugged conversations also accumulated.

In most cases, the justification for the snooping was minimal, our sources say. Some people had their mail read simply because they had sensitive assignments.

Our sources recall the case, for example, of an American agent for the supersecret Army Security Agency. Its operations were being spied upon by an even more secret Army counterintelligence team.

The security man, bored with his work on the West German side of the Czechoslovakian border, sneaked across for a holiday in Prague. He played cat-and-mouse with the Czech authorities and had a brief, volcanic affair with a Czech beauty. Then he slipped back into West Germany.

But unknown to him, the counterintelligence sleuths were reading his mail. They found out about his romantic interlude when he received a letter from his Czech girl friend asking when he planned to return to Prague.

The government's habit of prying into people's mail, in disregard of the law, is one of the abuses the Senate committee is supposed to investigate. But our sources say the leads often aren't followed up for lack of competent investigators.

In other cases, lawyers who came to the committee from federal agencies simply call their contacts in the intelligence services, obtain a denial of wrongdoing and call this an "investigation."

Footnote: A committee spokesman gave us this statement: "We are looking into mail opening, whether it involves the Defense Department, CIA, IRS or anybody else in government. We also regard the opening of U.S. mail overseas as a domestic matter." The Defense Department had no comment.

Ford's Folly: The day before the unconditional surrender of Saigon, President Ford was still fighting for more military aid for the Saigon regime.

The confidential minutes of his April 29 meeting with congressional leaders show he refused to drop military aid from a bill to help the South Vietnamese.

House Democratic leader Tip O'Neill, according to the confidential minutes, called for a "clean bill," stripped of the military funds. Even House Republican leader John Rhodes agreed the bill should be sent "back to conference with instructions to delete military aid."

"Why not clean it up and remove the controversy?" O'Neill repeated.

"Tip," pleaded the President, "when you get to the appropriations, you can exclude the military fund use." In other words, the President wanted to hang on to the military aid until the last possible minute, leaving it up to the appropriations committees to knock it out if it were no longer needed.

Speaker Carl Albert warned that the military aid provision would create "controversy."

"Let's struggle to strike the most unified course of action," urged Rep. Phillip Burton, D-Calif., the House Democratic caucus chairman.

"The present bill," O'Neill persisted, "establishes a precedent which I'm opposed to."

"You can limit it in the appropriations," the President pleaded again.

"Maybe," suggested Vice President Nelson Rockefeller, "the precedent some fear would be a very useful precedent sometime in the Middle East."

The following day Saigon surrendered and the Communists inherited $5 billion worth of U.S. military hardware. At least this was $700 million less than the Communists would have taken over if President Ford had been given his way.

Welfare lobby wins again

Jeffrey Hart

Six months ago, it looked as if President Gerald Ford were going to appoint former Rep. Edith Green, an Oregon Democrat, to succeed Casper Weinberger as Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare.

It would have been a brilliant appointment. Though Edith Green is a Democrat, she keeps the taxpayer very much in mind where HEW expenditures are concerned. While still in Congress, she published an important article on the interlocking relationships between the expanding education and social welfare empires, and she coined the term, Education-Poverty Industrial Complex. As the ranking Democrat on the House Education and Labor Committee, she spotlighted the way in which numerous firms and poverty-welfare entrepreneurs were reaping huge profits from Federally funded research and social welfare programs, and, of course, lobbying in Congress for ever expanding welfare-related budgets.

All of this, it hardly needs to be said, comes largely out of the shrinking paychecks of the American middle class. The annual HEW budget has risen from $1.9 billion in 1953 to $52 billion in 1970 to $118 billion for the current fiscal year.

With Edith Green at HEW, the middle American wage-earner would have had at least some representation for his interests.

News leak

Rep. Green retired from Congress last year after 20 years with the lower chamber, and then last fall the news leaked that President Ford had tapped her for the HEW job and that she had tentatively accepted. Naturally, at that disclosure, the enormously powerful education and welfare lobbies went to work on Capitol Hill.

Some measure of the hostility generated against Edith Green is provided by the reaction when Ford nominated her as a member of the new legal services corporation, a favorite enterprise of the welfare interest. In a virtually unprecedented move, 65 liberal Congressmen signed a petition to the Senate opposing her confirmation. This was a discourtesy to a former colleague, and it was also a breach of decorum for one legislative chamber to presume to instruct the other, but the welfare interest had to be served.

In theory, the legal services corporation will provide legal assistance to those unable to afford it for themselves. In actual fact, as everyone knows, it will be staffed by young liberal and radical lawyers who will promote their favorite crusades at the expense of the taxpayers.

It now appears that the education and welfare lobby has succeeded in blocking Edith Green's HEW nomination, since several other names are being conspicuously bruited about. They include Rep. Albert Quie (R., Minn.), an old friend of Gerald Ford, and former Rep. Martha Griffiths (D., Mich.); but the front-runners appear to be Charles Goodell and John Veneman, both liberal Republicans.

Goodell is an old friend of Ford's; and the President, since taking office, has seemed eager to work him into the Administration in some way or other. At present he is winding up his work on the clemency board.

Relentless opponent

Veneman is a liberal Californian and a relentless opponent of Ronald Reagan's efforts to keep the state budget under control. He is the Rockefeller candidate for the HEW post.

Either Veneman or Goodell would, of course, sail through the Senate confirmation process, with hosannas from the education and welfare interests and from the liberal media. But the nomination of either would be a clear signal by the Administration that it had no stomach whatever for a collision with the Education-Poverty Industrial Complex.

Neither Veneman nor Goodell would rock the boat at HEW, limit its metastasizing growth, or try to save the taxpayers any money.

The Federal war against the American middle class would go on as before.

Rip-off

Recession, slump, depression — What's the difference?

Sylvia Porter

Q. The slump is bottoming out, you say. You also say this has been much worse than a recession but it hasn't been a depression. What are the distinctions?

A. There are no set, rigid standards. I regret to report, so there can be no neat answers to this question. But since I know that millions of you would like a clear answer, I'll take a stab at it by summarizing all the differences in three words: depth, duration, breadth.

In depth, the 1973-75 slump is the most severe business decline since the 1930s, much worse than any post-World War II drop.

In duration, the 1973-75 slump also is by far the longest of any since the 1930s, even if it ends very soon.

In breadth — impact on number of industries, services, occupations of all types — it has been the worst in a generation.

In unemployment, it ranks as the most severe since the catastrophic 1930s too.

The comparisons below which I've compiled to cover the crucial figures will, I submit, say it better than any words. "Gross National Product" is "real" — meaning it measures the declines in our total output of all goods and services after elimination of the impact of price changes on the figures. The figures for 1973-75 are the latest available, probably will get worse before they get better.

| 1953-54 recession | 6.1 |
| 1957-58 recession | 7.5 |
| 1960-61 recession | 7.1 |
| 1969-70 recession | 6.0 |
| 1973-75 slump | 9 plus (to date) |

Clip and save these comparisons — and update them for: yourselves as the slump does indeed level out and the worst is recorded.

The worst has not yet been recorded! Even though the bottom must be very near, the figures to come out in July, to cover the second quarter of '75, for instance, will be reflecting declines that took place in April and May.

As for the depth of the slump, such authorities as Dr. Walter Heller, chief economic adviser to both Presidents Kennedy and Johnson, argue that this slump is twice as deep as any previous post-World War II recession, because while real GNP has been falling, our potential has been continuing to clumb — so that U.S. industry is actually operating at only two-thirds of its potential.

Unemployment surely will reach the 9-10 per cent range as the youngsters pour out of schools this summer. AFL-CIO president Meany foresees the rate at a throat-catching 11.5 per cent.

And in one very real sense, this has been the worst slump of all. For in 1929-32, prices at least fell too along with incomes — but this time, they galloped at the start of the decline and even now, 18 months later, are still climbing at an intolerable rate.

It's only the newcomers who object to progress

Editor, The Record:

I have read in newspapers and heard over the radio many arguments against truck traffic on Rte. 209, airport, and currently, a truck terminal on Rte. 611. It now appears that much of the opposition is from people who recently moved into our area and expect everything to stand still so they can have a peaceful and idyllic lifestyle without any of the urban problems they ran away from.

A man who spoke on WVPO's Comment program once, suggested tractor-trailers get off 209 and use 402 to go north to Rte. 84. If this man ever drove a tractor-trailer and did as he suggests, he would use 402 twice, his first and last time. This road would be ideal for city people to locate on but it is one of the most dangerous roads a truck driver could use. Bear in mind that truck drivers use highways every day and a local resident who may use 209 once or twice a year should not expect the road to be cleared of his trip.

Do these objectors ever consider that the average tractor-trailer costs the owners $6,500 in taxes per year, per unit? Considering all the money truck owners pay they are entitled to full use of highways. How much does a car owner pay in comparison?

Residents of the Mountain View area on 611 argue that a truck terminal neighbor is bad for the economy. This argument is ridiculous and is adverse to local people who would be employed at the truck terminal. An example of this is Roadway Express who employed over 100 local residents at salaries more than double their previous employment. For instance, Roadway hired 55 drivers at $6.71 per hour plus many fringe benefits. These men previously drove trucks for an average of $3.00 per hour with little or no fringe benefits. Many of these drivers were on seasonal jobs and were laid off after the season ended; now they work steadily.

Another argument used by dissenters is school buses. This issue is always close to the heart of people with school children. However, school bus drivers happen to be among the best drivers in the area, be they male or female. When did you hear of a tractor-trailer ramming a school bus? The writer has been here a long time and does not know of any such accident.

The third factor of the anti-terminal people is their over-500-name petition against the terminal. Drive up 611 and count the houses on or near 611. If you drive up to Tannersville you may count 100 houses. Therefore, I wonder where the other 400 signers live. They must live on streets where no tractor-trailer ventures and most likely they are not affected by the proposed terminal.

Our main consideration should be our local citizens, not the retiree's from big cities. Local people would obtain employment and enjoy a much larger income. In turn they will make the local merchants happy by buying things they probably had to do without. Lastly, all taxpayers should be happy as without doubt Consolidated Freightways will be paying a substantial tax bill to the township and county.

Vietnamese learn 'hurry-up-and-wait' at Indiantown

FT. INDIANTOWN GAP, Pa. (UPI) — Standing in line. It is a custom most Americans take for granted. But it is one of the many confusing lessons the newly-arrived Vietnamese refugees have to learn about the American way of life.

"In Vietnam, there was no such thing as waiting your turn," said John Cullen, who spent four years in the country with the Catholic Relief Service. "The people would mob a movie ticket booth and push and shove to get to the window."

But according to a Vietnamese interpreter for the Lutheran Immigration and Refugee Service who asked that his name not be used, it was one of the first lessons the refugees learned upon their arrival on Guam.

"We saw very quickly that the Americans wanted us to wait in line and we learned to make a line and respect the order," he said. "We must learn every day. We must learn to see, observe and learn the American ways."

Many of the refugees are from Vietnam's big cities and are used to American people and American customs and should have little trouble adjusting to life in the United States, officials say.

But the farmers and fishermen —the Vietnamese refer to them as "country people"—are either unaware of or have many misconceptions about our land and the people. Some seem humorous; others are very serious.

The Rev. Leon Phillips, of the Lutheran Immigration and Refugee Service, recalled that when he was setting up shop at the refugee center in Camp Pendleton, Calif., refugees complained about the cold, damp air coming off the ocean at night.

"They told us they wanted to go somewhere else where it was warm and not stay in Southern California where it was cold," Phillips said.

He also said that many of the Vietnamese refugees did not want to settle in the northern part of the United States because of the winters.

"They have no concept that houses are heated and that you can be warm inside, even though it is cold outside," Phillips said. "We had to explain to them that in America, houses have furnaces."

The interpreter said, however, the refugees have a practical reason for not wanting to settle in the north.

"We are afraid of the cold because we would have to buy much clothing to keep warm and pay for the heat," he said. "If we go to a warm place we can wear the same clothes all year and save money."

But at the same time, according to Cullen, some refugees are afraid to settle in the South because they have heard that the people do not tolerate non-whites.

Workers for the volunteer groups that are trying to settle the refugees agreed that the Vietnamese will have to adjust to American family customs and especially to treatment of the elderly.

"The refugees are going to be very surprised by the houses in the United States, especially when they learn that small families live in big houses," said Susan Lenhart, a nurse with the International Rescue Committee.

"In Vietnam, a family of four that had a five or six room house all to themselves would be very rich. In most cases, elders, their children and grandchildren live under the same roof."

Chu Tat Sy, a Vietnamese refugee working as an interpreter for the International Rescue Committee, said his people will be surprised to learn that in the U.S., people can say anything they want anytime they want.

Also, he said with a wide grin, "many of the country people think every American is a millionaire and that everyone here has a job."

The Rev. Fred Blank, of the Lutheran Immigration and Relief Service, said the Vietnamese have a respect for their elders that he wishes most Americans had.

"The other day I was interviewing a young refugee who told me his last name was Quang. 'Do I address you as Mr. Quang?' I asked him,"

Blank, 62, said.

"He paused for a moment, looked at my gray hair and said to me, 'You may call me Quang. I will call you Mr. Blank.'"

Said the interpreter for the Lutherans: "Many of the refugee families brought the elders with them. But if the elders refused to leave the country, the families stayed rather than leave without them."

He said one of the refugees' great fears is that the Americans will not be able to find sponsors for the large families and will try to break the families up.

Judge overrules patient, allows critical amputation

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — Saying he was ruling "in favor of life," a judge Wednesday gave permission to a hospital to amputate a critically ill man's right leg despite the objections of the patient and his family.

Common Pleas Court Judge Rolph Larsen said afterward he knew of no legal precedent in the United States upon which he could have based his decision.

Larsen made the ruling after hearing testimony from Dr. William E. Novogradac of Shadyside Hospital and from the man's daughter, Sophie Mali.

Novogradac told the court his patient, Milko Husar, 67, had little chance to survive a gangrene condition, caused by vascular blockage, with or without the operation.

"I feel the chances of his survival are almost zero without the amputation," Novogradac said. "If the disease process is allowed to continue, he will certainly die."

But even with the operation, the doctor said Husar's chances of recovery were slight. The doctor told the judge Husar was against the operation. He described his patient as "confused and agitated" and incapable of making a competent decision on whether the surgery should be performed.

"He's just not aware of what's going on," the physician said. "I asked them (Husar's family) to perform the surgery in an attempt to save his life. They refused."

The doctor indicated Husar's right leg would have to be amputated above the knee and his left leg would probably also have to be amputated.

The daughter testified her father had told the family, "Don't let them cut off my leg."

Saying she had a "commitment" to honor her father's wishes, the visibly shaken woman added, "Only God knows what to do in a situation like this."

Kallinger case mistrial declared

HARRISBURG (UPI) — Dauphin County Judge John C. Dowling Wednesday declared a mistrial in the burglary and robbery case of Philadelphia shoemaker Joseph Kallinger because a jury matron expressed her opinion to sequestered jurors.

In a brief order from the bench, Dowling said he had investigated the reports that Della Simonetti, the jury matron, "did express to several of the jurors her opinion concerning the defendant's guilt and did further discuss information concerning other alleged criminal acts on his part."

Follow advice for hernia

I have had a hernia for many years. Recently; I saw an ad in a magazine. It said, "New breakthrough for hernias." Before I buy it, I want to ask your advice. My doctor thinks surgery is necessary to cure the hernia.

Mr. E.R.M., Mich.

Dear Mr. M :

The exploitation of people with hernias by manufacturers of special gadgets seems to be never-ending. As long as the public will purchase them without the advice of a physician, hucksters will sell them.

In your case, surgery had been advised. This cannot be taken too lightly, because there are definite reasons why some hernias should be operated on, even though they have caused no trouble for years.

Sometimes, a small loop of intestine can become caught in the hernial opening in the groin causing a serious complication. This demands emergency care.

In other instances, a small piece of intestine can move in and out of the opening. When this is present, doctors suggest surgery in order to be sure that intestinal complications do not occur.

There are some excellent trusses which are recommended by doctors to control the weakness or defect in the muscles. When a truss is suggested by a doctor and when the hernia is inspected at regular intervals, only then can the truss be used with safety.

I had an attack of intolerable itching after using an antibiotic that I took previously. Is it possible to become sensitive like this?

Miss V I . N.C.

Dear Miss L.:

It is well known to doctors that people can become sensitive to drugs and antibiotics that they had previously taken without any strange reaction at all.

Itching of the skin is, in reality, a form of pain. Impulses that pass through the nerves are exactly the same as those that cause severe pain sensations.

It is important to remember the specific drugs and antibiotics that produce unusual reactions. These should be called to the attention of your doctor so that he has a record of them and can substitute others.

I had a "shoulder separation" when I was a young boy. I've always been curious about what this means.

Mr. G.S.O., Maine

Dear Mr. O :

A "shoulder separation" is a tear of the ligaments and the muscles that attach the collar bone (clavicle) to the shoulder blade (scapula).

Unless this painful injury is treated with splints and rest, permanent limitation of motion of the shoulder can occur.

The degree of separation, partial or complete, determines the need for other forms of treatment. Sometimes, surgery is necessary to remove bone chips and to realign the ligaments.

Such injuries must not be casually treated for there is always the possibility that with neglect, limitation of motion and disability may result.

How to deal with mealybugs, scales

By GEORGE ABRAHAM
MEALYBUGS AND SCALES: Now's a good time to take a look at your house plants (especially the ferns) and see if they have mealybugs or scales on them. These are two of the toughest pests you'll have to contend with.

Mealybugs look like tiny puffs of cotton, while scale are more or less round and brownish. Both are protected by waxy coats of armor, but you can lick them.

Here are a few suggestions:
(1) Handpick and destroy them. A swab of cotton on a toothpick dipped in rubbing alcohol does the trick. Just dab a bit on each mass and be sure not to get any alcohol on the plants.

(2) Some gardeners scrub the plants with warm, soapy solution, and then spray with rotenone or pyrethrum, or nicotine sulfate. You can even dip the plants into the soapy water, with a little nicotine sulfate added as a dip.

(3) Malathion is death on exposed mealybugs, but it is also lethal on some plants such as jades and other crassulas. It also smells badly indoors.

(4) Spraying with white oil emulsion is another possibility for fighting scale and mealybugs.

(5) A systematic insecticide such as Isotox works well for killing toughies such as scale or mealybugs. You add it to the soil and water it in.

(6) Use a No-pest strip and gas the tough ones. Cut a 1 inch piece of the strip, and place it and the plant into a closed plastic bag for eight to 12 hours. Next day they are dead. Remove and burn.

PLANTS IN POTS: If you need only a few potted tomatoes, peppers, eggplants or melons, no reason why you can't start them in clay pots or peat pots now. They like a loose soil (one part each of sand, peat and loam) or you can use one of the instant soils such as Jiffy Mix, or Pro-Mix.

The secret for getting a good germination of melons, eggplant or pepper seed is plenty of heat. Give them a temperature of at least 72 degrees, up to 80 degrees, or maybe 85. Don't go below 70 degrees tes-pecially at night) as the seed will rot inside the seed coat.

Gardeners who used the fibre pots last year may have noticed that roots were confined inside, especially when the walls of the pots became dry. That's why we would like to remind you this year to tease the plants out of the fibre pots, by slitting the sides of the pots.

All types of organic pots (peat, paper, pressed manure, etc.) are a great innovation if you like to grow potted items such as tomatoes, etc. You can set the pot and all out, but be sure to slit the sides with a sharp knife before setting them out.

GREEN THUMB CLINIC: ANSWER: Try avocado, aralia Jade and flowering maple.

Increased activity shows interest rise in solar power

By GAIL NEVINS

A sudden gush of printed information in numerous and diverse publications and a three-day conference with more than 6,000 people in attendance in Washington, D.C. last weekend, all indicate the quickening tempo of popular interest in applied solar energy.

Most of the information suddenly available offers practical, current information on actually constructing solar systems now rather than abstract theories of why we should do so at some vague future date.

Last week's conference was organized by Solar Energy Industries Association, Inc. of Washington which claims 295 individual and corporate members.

Indication of the varied applications of solar energy now underway include installation of solar heating panels in schools in Washington and elsewhere; construction of sunshine heating for a new colony of vacation and ski homes in Quachee, Vermont; Santa Clara, California's plans to heat and cool community centers in this fashion and Colorado ranchers who want to use solar heat collectors instead of propane dryers to dry their grain.

A real departure from all of the talk about home and institutional use of solar energy is the like pace of research into its application in agriculture.

A study of the sun's potential in heating poultry houses is reported in "The Sun - A Poultry House Furnace," available from the West Virginia Agricultural Experiment Station, Morgantown, West Virginia 26505 (Bulletin 548T).

It reports that by carefully monitoring heat losses and gains, researchers found that their roof-mounted collector (300-BTU-per-square-foot capacity) reduced supplemental heat requirements to a bare minimum.

For an overview of the situation the Oregon legislature, two years ago, commissioned the state's Office of Energy Research and Planning to prepare a comprehensive study of Oregon's past, present and future energy needs.

Out of it has come a newly-released 500-page report containing a complete net energy audit of 14 major existing and proposed energy systems as they might relate to Oregon's and the nation's future.

The study recommends a complete halt to nuclear fission electric power and advocates a systematic transition to a solar-based economy.

It finds that troublesome features of developing non-nuclear energy sources are dwarfed by the awesome threats of a nuclear-based economy.

It is titled "Transition" and may be obtained by sending $5 to the Office of Energy Research, 185 13th N.E., Salem, Oregon 97310.

That dog in sheep's clothing may be out to get you

By MAUREEN RUFE
Pocono Record Reporter

Editor's note: This is the second in a four-part series of articles aimed at the adult-bicycle enthusiast who is interested in touring and commuting. The series has been prepared with cooperation from The Rev. Robert Brown, a member of the League of American Wheelmen and Wondering Wheels.

STROUDSBURG — His eyes carefully fixed on that narrow roadway leading into the rural development, Roudolf the sheep dog, stretched out his body on the cool morning grass, and concentrated on looking nonchalant so nobody would suspect that he was patrolling the cul-de-sac a few feet away.

The day had been relatively uneventful, when suddenly an intruder on a bicycle, of all things, came into view. It was a chance for "Rudy" to put another notch in his collar.

He remained poised for action as the bicycle safety flag bounced to and fro, the bike itself coming ever closer to Rousy's personal turf. Within seconds and without any apparent warning, the sheep dog darted forth directly in the path of the front wheel. The action sent the cyclist careening over his exquisitely taped handlebars and the driver wondered how it had all happened. Picking out cinders from his brush-burned knees, and contemplating a long walk home, with a badly bent-up bike, the cyclist was determined this was the last time he would meet a sheep dog head on.

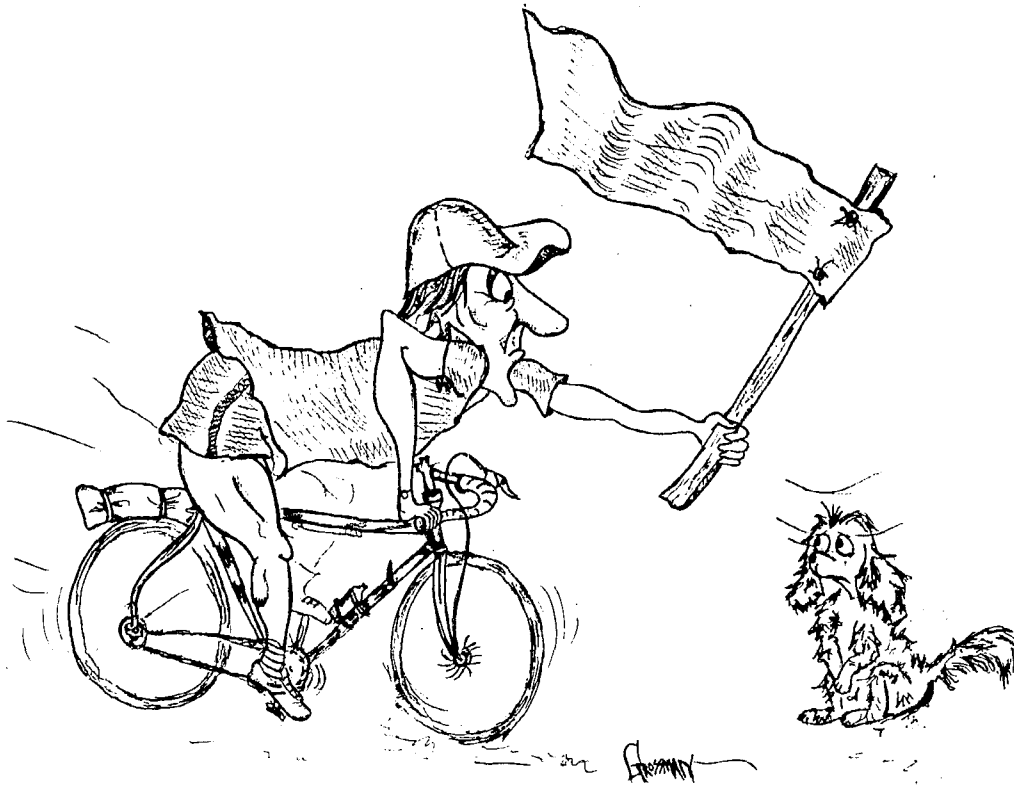

Man's best friend

If you are an avid cyclist, you too, probably wonder at times how the dog was ever tagged as man's best friend. It seems that the man who coined that phrase never rode a bicycle.

Although many people do not realize it, dogs can present important dangers to the serious cyclist. Bikers, who recognize this fact, however, know there are many precautions and practical counter measures they can employ to outmaneuver even experienced cul-de-sac guards like Roudolf.

One of the most important rules of the road in dealing with dogs is to stop before you have a head-on collision with one. If you are unable to distract the dog from running in front of your bike, stop before he stops you and you wind up in a bloody heap in the road.

If you use a little common sense, you can avoid this extreme situation.

It is also a wise idea to avoid places where dogs patrol cul-de-sacs or patrol steep up-hill grades or dead ends. These situations leave you little maneuverability.

Avoid conflict

If you are on a down-grade or level road, the easiest way to avoid conflict is to simply outrun the dog. Don't try the technique against greyhounds, however. If you can't pedal more than two miles an hour, forget it. But if the dog is slow, old or maybe has three legs, even then, you might have a fair chance of getting away in the nick of time.

Try to shoo him away with a loud yell. It's the noise you make that counts, and it's better to have the neighbors think you have suddenly lost your sanity than to return home minus your bicycle toe clips and perhaps a few toes to boot.

It is important to recognize that some dogs will bounce along as you ride and they will be barking because they think you want to play. This type of character would be distinguished from the dog that lays his ears flat against his head, snarls, and charges with his head held low.

Many bicyclists have found dog repellent to be very effective in turning away angry dogs. A short spray will discourage their attack and it is relatively harmless. There are commercial brands on the market and there are also homemade varieties you may want to experiment with. Thick-haired dogs like Roudolf, however, may not be affected at all with a spray, even if you spritz the whole can in his face.

Keep pedaling

If you have no repellent or it doesn't work, brace yourself and keep pedaling. If he is at your heels, he won't be able to get a good grip at anything. Also remember to look where you're going, as well as at the dog. You won't have to worry about a nasty sheep dog anymore if you've already flattened yourself into a nearby telephone pole.

There are some who suggest a dismount, depending on the situation. As stated earlier, when the dog attacks from the front, a dismount is a must. Some dogs will simply calm down when the bike stops because they think they have won.

If one continues to pursue, keep the bike between you and the dog until you can walk the machine out of view.

Use your flag

A particularly innovative way to handle dogs and keep them at a distance from the cyclist is using the red safety flags that so many drivers are using these days. The flag is inserted in a piece of copper tubing taped on the front handlebars where it can be grabbed easily. A piece of copper tubing about six inches long is bent at a slight angle and the portion below the bend is hammered flat. This section is taped to the handlebars with matching handlebar tape.

The bent portion sticks up from the handlebars. The flag can be inserted in the tubing so that it is extended slightly forward of the cyclist. The flag is still high enough to be seen easily by drivers of motor vehicles, and yet, is easy to pull out of the holder with one hand when it is needed quickly.

Giving the dog a gentle swat on the behind with the flag is usually enough to stop most attacks and the dog is not injured in the process. The flag can also be used to keep the dog away from the cyclist while the bike is still moving.

Using the full length of the flag, the dog can be kept five feet from the cyclist at all times.

Next: Selecting a bike and fitting it to you.

Bicyclists can survive automobile collisions

STROUDSBURG — You're cruising along on your bike, minding your own business and suddenly you hear the terrifying sound of screeching brakes along side of you.

The next thing you know, you're wrapped around the windshield wiper of a car with your legs and arms twisted up into a modern art sculpture that could make you the jazziest hood ornament in town.

Getting hit by an automobile is the ultimate nightmare for the cyclist, but one accident doesn't mean you should give up the sport; and fear of being hit doesn't mean you should not ride a bike either.

All cyclists should face the possibility that if they ride frequently in traffic, they may have a collision with a car. That does not mean they will be killed. In fact, many collisions result in minor scrapes for the cyclist, especially if he has some idea of what to do if a collision is unavoidable.

Firstly, it is important to realize that the angle where you are hit will determine the extent of injury.

Being hit from behind is rare, but if it happens to you, do not try to brake, but rather try to ride out the impact and steer for the shoulder or a safe place.

When stopped at an intersection always turn your wheel toward a safe place in the event that a car bumps you from behind. In this way you will not be thrown directly in front of on-coming traffic.

An important first step in bicycling, safety is wearing a helmet at all times. It may be warm and may not be glamorous, but it does provide good protection in case of accident.

This is especially important if you are ever faced with a head-on collision, which is the worst accident situation a cyclist faces.

When that happens, the bicycle driver should go limp and protect his head as he goes over the handlebars and hits the car.

If there is time to react, he should turn as hard as he can to avoid direct impact.

The most typical type of accident occurs when motorists make illegal turns into cyclists from the side.

If this happens to you, get your legs out of the way and allow the bike to be pushed out from under you. You will be thrown against the car rather than down underneath your bike in the road.

The cyclist can jump for the road or sidewalk, but there is a risk of head injuries with this reaction. A better alternative is to grab for the hood of the car.

If you do get in an accident, call the police and get the names of witnesses at the scene for your insurance company. Also, go to the hospital for a check-up even if you feel fine. Shock can hide serious injuries.

Canners hoard equipment

By LORA SHARPE
Family Fare Editor
PHILADELPHIA — The

growing legions of home canners could have all the canning equipment they need this summer — if they stop or refrain from hoarding available supplies.

Hoarding of supplies is a growing practice this summer, as home canners recall last year's short supply and more persons turn to gardening and canning.

The following past officers were installed: Doris Posinger, president; Alice Heater, senior vice president; Dorothy Counterman, junior vice president; Evelyn Frederick, treasurer; Grace Shook, chaplain; Martha Savercool, conductress; Eleanor Henry, guard, and Hazel Ellenberger, three-year trustee.

Nancy Harvey Steorts, assistant to the Secretary of Agriculture for Consumer Affairs, reported on the equipment supply situation Wednesday at a press conference sponsored by the USDA.

She named home canning as a major concern of the USDA because of the vast increase in gardens and last year's outbreaks of botulism.

While her prepared remarks detailed a report of supplies to meet demand, Steorts said that new reports of hoarding, particularly the lids used for canning, dimmed the supply situation.

"Manufacturers will not be able to meet the demand if hoarding continues," Steorts emphasized.

The agriculture department representative urged consumers to buy only those supplies which they can use this year so there is enough for everyone.

Steorts said she had received reports of Florida tourists bringing back cases of canning lids to the North for fear of a shortage here.

She also reported that a black market in lids had developed. Advertisements for lids at five times the normal price are appearing in newspapers, she said.

Without consumer hoarding, canning equipment supplies should adequately, if just barely, meet demand, government figures indicate.

Raw material shortages, partly responsible for last year's supply problem, have been alleviated while the equipment manufacturers have increased production to meet the growing demand, Steorts said.

Consumers were urged not to panic if canning supplies are not available before the canning season in their area. Distribution follows the canning season.

Distribution will also be through normal outlets. Those stores which did not carry home canning supplies will probably not have them this year.

This supply report was part of a regional conference on home canning and food safety.

Area Vocational Technical School — what's it about?

By ALAN K. COHEN
Vo-Tech Director

The Monroe County Area Vocational-Technical School serves the vocational and technical training needs of the Monroe County area for both secondary high school pupils and adults.

The school is a vocational training service center for the six high schools in the county and can presently accommodate approximately 540 students.

Pupils from the participating districts attend the Vocational-Technical School on an alternating basis. Half attend the morning session and the other half attend the afternoon session.

At their home school, pupils will be enrolled in the academic courses necessary to meet state requirements for high school graduation. Participation in extracurricular activities and sports will take place at the home high school. Training for adults and out-of-school youth is held in any program with sufficient enrollment and for which instructional equipment, facilities and instructors are available.

The 14 present offerings at the Area Vocational-Technical School are, Auto Body, Auto Mechanics, Carpentry, Cosmetology, Data Processing, Drafting and Design, Electricity, Food Preparation, Graphic Arts, Health Assistant, Horticulture, Machine Shop, Masonry and Plumbing. In addition, the evening school has offered a variety of 38 courses.

At this time of the year students and their parents become very interested or show a great deal of interest in course selections. We at the Area Vocational-Technical School in Bartonville have been contacted by parents and students with specific questions regarding our offerings. Some of the the area school where you will learn by doing.

Q. Is vocational-technical education only for the non-college bound pupil?

A. No! Technical programs and vocational programs provide the pupil with practical training as well as theoretical training. The programs at the Vo-Tech School will provide college and community college bound pupils with knowledge that will make their college training more meaningful. Education is more readily understood if you know "how" as well as "why."

Q. What atmosphere can I expect at the Monroe County Area Vocational-Technical School?

A. You will find an atmosphere for pupils who are learning by doing and where skills, ideas, interests and abilities are being acquired in shops and laboratories that are provided with the same type of basic equipment found in business, industry and the service occupations.

Q. What is the length of the courses at the Vo-Tech School?

A. Most of the courses are three years in length, starting in 10th grade. One of the programs, Health Assistant, has been a one-year program and is now expanding to a two-year offering.

Q. What is the length of the school day and year at the Area Vocational-Technical School?

A. The school year and day will generally be the same as your home school since participating districts have established an almost uniform school calendar.

Q. How do I select the right course?

A. If you have decided that vocational-technical education may be for you, arrange for an interview with your counselor at your home school.

Some additional general facts about graduates of Vocational-Technical High Schools in Pennsylvania indicate that about 80 per cent of the employment-bound students have a full-time job within one month after graduation. Approximately 93 per cent of those who are employed in their fields of study report that their training was good to excellent, about 51 per cent reported that they were highly

Education vs. economy

By JUDITH GELBER

The heyday of advancing American education seems over, and many people are using the current economic crisis to destroy important educational gains of the last few years, along with public acceptance of the need to do our best for our children.

Public education, from kindergarten through graduate school, is suffering severe reverses.

There is complete agreement that the ability to read well is crucial to academic success. It is also widely accepted that reading readiness is fostered in those all-important years before kindergarten. But many school districts are eliminating all but basic reading programs that have long proved inadequate, thereby almost assuring educational failure for many children.

There is the widespread belief that the children of the poor benefited most from these newly-developed reading programs. Consequently, there is the feeling that cutting out the expense of maintaining these programs will have little adverse effect on the majority of the children.

Sadly, however, advances made in improving the reading ability of deprived children were being applied throughout the school system. Now, every one's child will suffer the consequences of this misguided economy measure.

Another part of the economy wave that will create disastrous results for public education is the elimination of thousands of teaching posts. As a teacher, my sympathies may be suspect. But parents in particular should know that one of the greatest drawbacks to educational success is the badly over-crowded classroom.

There isn't any way for a teacher to achieve anything but minimum results — if that — when 35 or more children of every possible level of reading ability, motivation, mental ability and background are crowded into each class.

Furthermore, as special education programs for the retarded, the disturbed, the intractable and the learning disabled are reduced, the children in these programs will have to be placed in the regular classrooms, adding further to the chaos in the already over-burdened schools, and preventing these children from getting the special attention they need.

Our public colleges are also being dismembered by the economic meat ax. In New York City, for example, 20,000 students will be denied admission to the city's colleges in the next school year because several thousand teachers are to be dismissed.

Multiply that 20,000 many times over for state colleges and universities across the country, and the full meaning of the misguided economy measures will begin to penetrate. The rich, however, will still be able to afford to send their children to private colleges.

What the know-nothings in our government are telling us is that the richest, most powerful nation on earth has billions to spend to prepare for war, to make war, to pay for the results of war, and to nourish foreign nations, but has only a fistful of pennies to nourish the minds of our youth, and to provide them with the skills they need to earn a decent living.

Monroe picture improves

Job benefit claims drop

SCRANTON — Unemployment benefit claims for Monroe County have dropped approximately 9.3 per cent from last week's filing, according to attorney Guy A. Solfanelli, district manager for the bureau of employment security.

Statistics for Monroe County indicate 1,582 claims were filed last week, compared to 1,744 filed a week earlier.

Although the figures indicate a better immediate employment situation, when compared to last year, the statistics still show unemployment benefit claims to be running high.

At the same time last year, there were 537 unemployment claims filed with the Stroudsburg office. When compared to the 1,582 recently reported, the claims are running 194.6 per cent above just one year ago.

On the broader scale, claims for the seven-county Northeastern Pennsylvania region registered a decrease of 1,967 last week for a total of 32,373 — or 5.7 per cent below the 34,340 filed the preceding week.

As with Monroe County, however, the regional picture is still bleak when compared with claims filed a year ago. Overall, the seven-county region is running 132.4 per cent ahead of the unemployment claims filed during a corresponding week in 1974.

A decrease in benefit claims appeared last week in Lackawanna, Luzerne, Monroe, and Wyoming Counties.

Unemployment claims increased in Pike, Susquehanna and Wayne Counties.

Board reverses position

Pocono votes to join flood insurance plan

By BRUCE POSTEN

Pocono Record Reporter
TANNERSVILLE — Pocono Township Supervisors have agreed to join the federal flood insurance program to beat the July 1 deadline for applications. At earlier meetings, supervisors had opposed opting for federal flood insurance, fearing that federal requirements would prohibit development in much of the flood prone area in the township.

However, Detlef Hansen, solicitor, explained that the supervisors could not get future federal grants if they failed to approve the flood insurance program.

In other business, supervisors allocated a total of $52,959 in 1975-76 revenue sharing funds. Supervisors decided to boost their park fund by $14,559, giving the township over $100,000 for the project.

Other appropriations were: $5,000, public safety and capital expenditures; $3,000, operating maintenance and $30,000, public transportation.

To supplement funding for the park, supervisors are also considering applying for a Department of Community Affairs grant which would give the township $17,036 or 50 per cent of the project cost, which ever is less.

Elmer Munch, township secretary, said a site must be selected before an application is submitted to the department.

Supervisors also took the following actions:

— Announced a June 12 hearing for amendments to two township zoning ordinances involving multi-family dwellings and zoning permits and variances.

— Rejected a request by Pocono Township Firemen for $10,000 in revenue sharing funds for a fire truck to be delivered in the fall. Supervisors voted to give firemen $5,000 instead.

— Supported a letter from Monroe County Commissioners on an increase of state payments in lieu of taxes for land in the township. Sullivan County has asked municipalities to support legislation that would increase state payments from 20 cents to $1.00 an acre. Pocono Township has 655 acres of state land.

— Offered to pay for a permit for a flashing light at Fairview Ave. and Pocono Summit

Road if Pocono Manor pays the cost of installation and maintenance. Supervisors received a letter from the Pennsylvania Department of Transportation (PennDOT) stating the light was illegally installed and was not working.

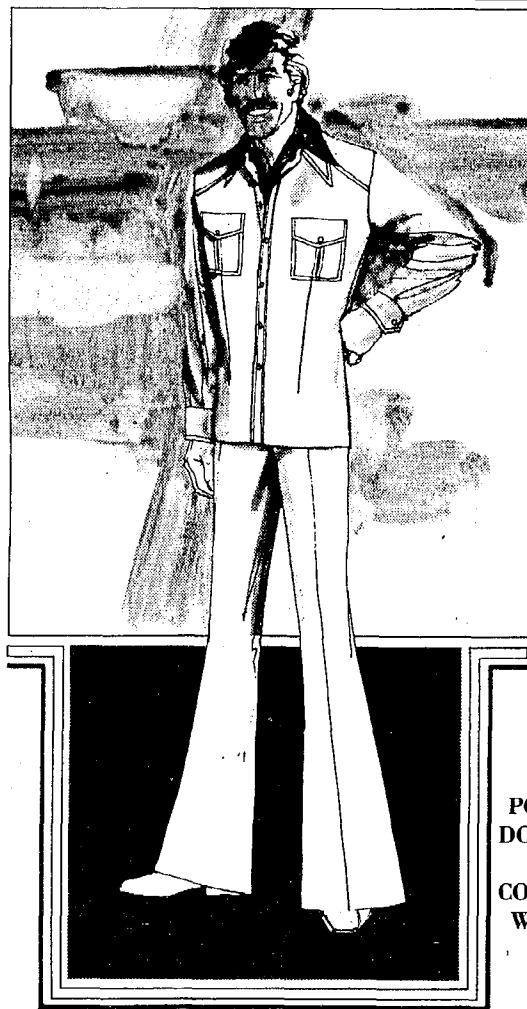

— And reappointed Earl Hillard for another five-year term on the planning commission. Although they took no action, supervisors said they will consider reappointing Floyd DeHaven to another term on the commission when his term expires this year.

Arlington school may go

By JEFF WIDMER
Pocono Record Reporter
STROUDSBURG — The 143 students presently attending classes at the Arlington Heights Elementary School in Stroud Township may not return to that school next year.

Samuel O. Wells III, superintendent of the Stroudsburg Area School District, told a crowd of residents Wednesday night the district may take elementary students out of the school and rent it to Colonial Northampton Intermediate Unit 20.

Unit 20 would use the building to educate mentally handicapped students of the district and surrounding areas, he said.

Administrators have considered closing the school to cut its proposed $5.9 million budget and real estate tax increase of 25 mills.

But Wells told people attending the open policy meeting of the Stroudsburg Board of Education that the district also has an obligation to provide an education and more than sub-standard classrooms for the handicapped. He said special education youngsters currently are taught in school basements and churches.

When a resident asked the board whether they knew if Unit 20 would even rent the school, Dr. Ronald Huber, executive director of Unit 20, commented, "We would accept that Arlington school for next year."

If the school is closed to elementary students, the 143 kindergarten through fourth graders would be bused to other elementary schools nearest the students' homes, said Russell Treible, director of elementary schools.

Prior to the public meeting, Treible said administrators have not calculated the exact amount of money the district will save if it rents the Arlington Heights School for $14,000 to $15,000 a year to Unit 20.

He said the salaries of some of the five teachers in the school could be saved. Those five faculty will not be laid off; they will move to other schools within the district and replace teachers with less seniority.

Sewerage study approved

Stroud eager to begin plumbing

STROUDSBURG — Saying they're eager to get started, Stroud Township supervisors Wednesday adopted a sewerage feasibility study for a collection system and said the next move belongs to the Monroe County General Authority.

By approving the study done by RKR-Hess Associates, the township agrees that sewerage is feasible in the township, according to Supervisor William Crooks.

Crooks said there are no problems with the general authority on planning the system and that the township is "probably more eager than any other municipality because we need it."

The resolution adopted Wednesday states that the township has reviewed the sewerage feasibility plan as it relates to the collection system and finds it acceptable.

Requirements for interceptors and treatment are the responsibility of the general authority.

The township wants the general authority to provide appropriate and cost effective interceptor and treatment services as a condition to the design and construction of a Stroud Township collection system.

The feasibility study done by RKR-Hess was in addition to the regional study completed by Albright and Friel.

The sewerage system in Stroud Township is to be part of an overall system for eastern Monroe County planned for the boroughs of Stroudsburg, East Stroudsburg and Delaware Water Gap.

The resolution also said the township will strive to attain long range sewerage objectives in the township.

In other matters Wednesday, August Lockwitch reiterated previous complaints he made to the supervisors about flooding in the Learn Road and Cobble Lane area.

Lockwitch repeated his claim that most of the runoff water comes from parking lots at Drackett Co. and Trumatic and often creates a two-foot deep lake in his yard. "I'm asking for help from Stroud Township and I hope I will get it," Lockwitch said. "I didn't create the problem."

The supervisors arranged to meet with Lockwitch and township engineer John Dennis later this month to discuss solutions to the flooding problem.

Sewerage hearing set

EAST STROUDSBURG—A public hearing on the proposed sewerage system for eastern Monroe County is to be held at 8 p.m. Thursday, June 19 in Room 117 of Stroud Hall at East Stroudsburg State College.

Residents and township officials will have the opportunity to ask questions about the proposed system and to state their views regarding the plan.

The plan calls for installing sewerage facilities to serve the boroughs of Stroudsburg, East Stroudsburg, Delaware Water Gap, and townships of Stroud, Smithfield and a portion of Middle Smithfield.

Municipalities included in the plan have received a preliminary report on the plan prepared by VEP-Elam and Popoff Associates, engineers. The first draft of the proposal was sent to them to be reviewed prior to the public hearing.

S-burg can't plug wet back yard

STROUDSBURG — From Lester "Pug" Boushell's back yard, it looks like Foxtown Hill is leaking.

Boushell, who resides at 401 Clermont Ave., had his councilman Joseph Wallace ask the borough council to do something about his serious drainage problem.

Wallace described the lawns of Boushell and his neighbor as "very wet."

He assumed the water was running down Foxtown Hill, under the road, and onto Boushell's property.

But borough engineer Edward C. Hess, who was familiar with the problem, said the seepage was caused by a high water table and did not flow from the hill.

Hess estimated it would cost between $3,000 and $4,000 to alleviate the problem.

Warning the council it might set an expensive precedent by repairing the drainage problem, borough manager Ralph Bender, Jr. said if they fixed Boushell's they would also have to fix his and former manager Harold Snyder's drainage problems.

Council appointed a committee to survey the situation on Clermont Avenue.

In other business, council accepted with regret the resignation of Planning Commission chairman John Granger, who had served on the commission for three years.

Granger submitted his resignation effective immediately citing additional business responsibilities due to the moving of his store as the reason for resigning.

Council granted the Stroudsburg Fire Department permission to parade and exhibit equipment in the Four Counties Fireman's Parade in Walnutport, June 21.

Council granted the Businessmen's Association permission to hold sidewalk sales July 17 through 19.

Council adopted the 1975 revisions to the BOCA codes. It will consider amendments to the enforcement portion of its building codes at the next council meeting.

Wallace asked Bender to send a letter to Martz and Greyhound Bus Companies asking them to "stick to 611 and .191 and keep off the side streets."

Wallace said he had personally witnessed several buses driving on side streets in South Stroudsburg, notably Clermont Avenue and Bryant Street.

Mayor Loney asked the councilman to consider the topic of ward reapportionment for discussion at the next meeting, particularly in light of the 380 new residential units being constructed soon in the Fourth Ward.

Three police hurt in struggle

EAST STROUDSBURG — Three policemen were injured Wednesday while trying to subdue a man police say went berserk in a residential area.

East Stroudsburg Chief of Police Charles McDonald said charges will be filed today against an unidentified man who ran naked and screaming down Broadheads Street.

While trying to tackle and subdue the six foot-four, 200-225 lb. man, East Stroudsburg Assistant Chief Richard Notz and Ptl. Alan Pride suffered injured backs and various cuts and bruises.

Stroudsburg Ptl. Elwood Longyhore dislocated an elbow in the fracas viewed by dozens of residents. All three men were treated and released at the General Hospital of Monroe County, East Stroudsburg. Stroud Township police also assisted.

Student director

STROUDSBURG — Deborah Hanks of Wedgewood Lake Estates, a junior at Stroudsburg High School, has been elected by students to be their newest representative on the Stroudsburg Area School Board. She replaces Jonathan Newman.

Lights to go up, but darkly

STROUDSBURG — In the interests of economy and in anticipation of a prolonged battle with the state Department of Transportation (PennDOT), the Stroudsburg Borough Council decided to erect lights at the West Main Street-Dreher Avenue intersection but to keep them inoperable.

The lighting system PennDOT has proposed for the intersection would provide lighted "walk-don't walk" signs which would flash when traffic from Dreher Avenue is allowed to turn onto West Main St.

Attorney Samuel Newman, representing the school board, said the board feels the flashing light versus the steady light concept is a "sophisticated distinction for a first grader."

The school board has long been concerned since Morey Elementary School students have to cross the widened intersection.

An earlier dispute was settled by the board's agreement to grant an easement on its property so the light pole could be erected in such a way that school buses would not hit it. In return, the borough council agreed to erect a sign at the school's driveway indicating to out-of-town drivers that the driveway is not a through street.

Newman reiterated, however, that the school board still prefers no traffic signals at all and just crossing guards at the intersection.

As for the walk-don't walk light, Newman said, "We want all the traffic to stop when we're telling the kids to cross."

Second ward councilman Howard Popkin suggested that if the council perseveres in its opposition to the walk sign, PennDOT might eventually yield.

The reason the poles for the lights would have to be erected is that they are being paid for as part of the Stofflet Street development program, which must be closed out by the end of the month.

S-burg uncertain of sewer price

STROUDSBURG — The Stroudsburg Borough Council wants to sit down with the Monroe County General Authority's engineer and bond counsel and find out how much joining a regional sewage program would cost the borough.

Council hopes to arrange such a meeting for sometime before a scheduled June 19 public hearing at which all municipalities involved will react to the authority's more than 1,000-page report.

Planning Commission member Mrs. Jacqueline Levergood, who is also a member of the county General Authority, spoke for both groups in a lengthy discussion with council Wednesday.

As a result of the discussion, both sides made known what they feel to be the chief sewerage problems facing the borough and expressed their frustrations with the whole procedure of regional sewage planning.

Mrs. Levergood told council members they have three alternatives: one is to do nothing, another is to go along with the regional plan and the third is to solve their sewer problems themselves.

"If you decide to do nothing," Mrs. Levergood said, "I'm guessing DER (the Department of Environmental Resources) will swoop down upon you."

She said the state agency is probably holding off on citing the borough for violations because it is aware the regional plan is under consideration.

Mrs. Levergood said if the borough elected to go along with the General Authority, it is in the best position of any of the municipalities as far as negotiating a price.

This is because Stroudsburg has its own sewage plant and every street in the borough is sewered but Dreher Avenue and Phillips Street.

She compared Stroudsburg with East Stroudsburg, saying East Stroudsburg's position is probably second-best because it owes more money on its sewage plant.

Court grants move for murder case

STROUDSBURG — A change of venue request by a 17-year-old East Stroudsburg murder suspect was granted Wednesday by a Monroe County Court judge, one day after the trial was to begin.

The decision means the trial for Gregory Powlett of 20 Kiwanis St. will be held in another county which will be determined by the State Supreme Court.

Powlett is accused in the shooting death of James D. Zane, 57, an East Stroudsburg R.D. service station owner during a Jan. 24 robbery.

Two other youths charged in the case, Gregg Porter and Michael Chase, both of East Stroudsburg, have pleaded guilty to a general charge of homicide. A subsequent degree of guilt hearing resulted in their convictions on third degree murder.

In handing down the decision, President Judge Arlington W. Williams said there has been insufficient time elapsed between the publication of articles on Chase and Porter to allow the publicity to fade from the minds of the jurors.

"If we were to continue the case until our next trial term to permit sufficient time to elapse between the publication of the Chase-Porter guilty pleas and the date of the trial to warrant a finding that such lapse of time had caused the memory of the publicity to fade, we are faced with a possible petition to dismiss the case because the Commonwealth had violated the defendant's right to a prompt trial."

Regarding previously published articles on the case, Williams said, "While the news articles were factual and non-inflammatory they acquainted the public with: 1) That Porter and Chase claim the shot which killed James Zane was fired by Gregory Powlett; 2) That two of his co-defendants had pleaded guilty to criminal homicide; and 3) That the court found that the agreed statement of facts is sufficient to establish felony murder."

Williams stated, "We do not believe that the publicity in this case would of itself warrant the grant of a change of venue."

The judge continued, "However, we are of the opinion that the publicity occurred so close to the trial date that Powlett could not be fairly tried at our June term of court . . . A change of venue is required to assure a fair trial."

Pen Argyl man admits burglary

STROUDSBURG — A 28-year-old Pen Argyl man who allegedly shot at police during a burglary and eluded police for more than a month pleaded guilty to charges of burglary, theft and receiving stolen property Wednesday.

Charles Rinehart entered the pleas in Monroe County Court but was remanded to Farview State Hospital pending a presentence investigation.

Rinehart pleaded guilty to burglarizing the residence of Sam Valenze of Long Pond, a Tunkhannock Township policeman, Nov. 27, 1974.

Two female companions were also arrested in connection with the case. One has pleaded guilty to receiving stolen property and the other has been found guilty of burglary. According to police reports, Rinehart and one of the suspects fled the scene of the burglary while shooting at police with a revolver. The two female suspects were apprehended that day, but Rinehart was not arrested until Jan. 8 at his residence.

Charges of aggravated assault and reckless endangerment against Rinehart were not prosecuted in view of the guilty pleas.

In other court action Wednesday, Salvatore Blando of Pocono Summit pleaded guilty to theft. A presentence investigation was ordered.

Lawrence Petruska of Paterson, N.J. pleaded guilty to unauthorized use and was sentenced to four to 23 months in jail and fined $200.

Raymond Bentham of Conowingo, Md. was placed in an accelerated rehabilitation program and on 90-days probation for burglary and theft stemming from a March 21 incident in Mount Pocono.

Charges of burglary and theft against Andrew Minnich of Allentown were not prosecuted.

Eric Cole of Burlington, Ont. forfeited his bail for failing to appear on a charge of driving while under the influence.

In a juvenile matter, a 17-year-old Mineola boy was placed on probation for a year. He was petitioned into juvenile court for burglary and theft.

Judge James R. Marsh told the youth it is the final chance to mend his ways. "You test out very well but having brains and using them are two different things," Marsh said.

The youth admitted to the judge that he has run away from the Allentown State Hospital three times.

The boy's father told the court the youth "is a good worker if directed in the right way but I can't direct him 24 hours a day."

Terms of the probation include attending the county drug and alcohol abuse program and obtaining gainful employment within two weeks.

CB radios were stolen from tractor trailers of Kenneth York of Ashborough, North Carolina and Walter Jorgensen of Fairfield, and an unsuccessful attempt was made to steal one from Charles Fisher of Kansas. The front window of Fisher's vehicle was smashed, according to police.

He was arraigned Wednesday before District Magistrate Eleanor Randolph. The alleged offenses were said to occur May 6, May 27 and June 4. A hearing has been set for 1 p.m. June 13.

Grease fire

MOUNT POCONO — A pan of grease caught fire in a first floor apartment occupied by Jerri and Ralph Sole, Cresco, R.D. 1 late Tuesday night, destroying their electric kitchen range.

According to fire chief Dave Carey, the fire was quickly contained to the range area of the kitchen. Four trucks and about 20 men from the Pocono Mountain fire company answered the call.

About 20 men and seven trucks answered the 12:01 p.m. call Wednesday. The fire was out in 30 minutes.

Hostage eventually released

By BRUCE POSTEN

Pocono Record Reporter
MILFORD — A Milford woman was "shocked and surprised" last week to read a front page news story about Marxist guerrillas holding four hostages in an African jungle hideout — especially when she learned her niece was one of the victims.

Mrs. Eleanor Wise of Milford read that her niece, 24-year-old Barbara Smuts of Ann Arbor, Mich., was one of four kidnapped victims who were captured by guerrillas in a raid on a Tanzania research station.

"I was very shocked to see her name in the paper," Mrs. Wise said.

"I knew she was going to be in Africa, so I knew it had to be her," she said.

Miss Smuts, the only hostage to be released by the guerrillas, is currently in Dar es Salaam, Tanzania with her mother, according to Mrs. Wise.

"I don't know why she was the one released, but I'm certainly relieved," she said.

Mrs. Wise said Miss Smuts plans not to leave Tanzania until the other hostages are released.

She said her niece was one of 30 students doing graduate work at a research station run by Jane Goodall, a researcher famous for her studies and television reports on the behavior of chimpanzees.

When the terrorists released Miss Smuts, they demanded a $500,000 ransom for the rest of the hostages — two Stanford University students and a Dutch woman — the release of Zaire guerrillas held in Tanzanian jails and arm supplies. The Tanzanian government rejected the demands.

Stanford University announced Wednesday that it does not want to pay the $500,000 and would only pay the ransom with great reluctance.

Dr. David Hamburg, a Stanford professor representing the university, said the university would not stand in the way of private individuals who would want to raise the funds.

However, he said the university would want to "minimize the incentive for people to repeat this kind of thing again."

Another Stanford professor is currently trying to contact the guerrillas and get an assessment of what the situation requires, Hamburg said.

He said the fact the kidnapers have already received worldwide publicity might be an incentive to them to release the students unharmed.

Congress may return funding for tourism

OTTAWA NEWS SERVICE
Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — Rep. Fred B. Rooney, D-15, Wednesday said there is a "very good chance" Congress will vote to override President Ford's veto of a bill to promote tourist travel in the United States.

Rooney is circulating a letter among his colleagues, drumming up support for his bill which would authorize $2.5 million during the next fiscal year to promote tourism.

The House passed the bill May 13 by a vote of 287-132, but Ford vetoed it last week on grounds that it was too expensive. The bill would authorize an additional $25 million in fiscal 1977 and $30 million in fiscal years 1978 and 1979.

The guerrillas belong to the self-styled People's Revolution Party which has been waging warfare against Zaire government troops in Eastern Zaire for several years.

Congress may return funding for tourism

Rooney pointed out that tourism is a $61 billion a year industry, and supports four million jobs in the U.S. Tourism is among the top three industries in 46 states, he said.

"The U.S. Travel Service has proven that the federal dollars invested in this program bring a 10 to one return of the investment," Rooney added. "How many federal programs can make this claim?"

The Bethlehem Democrat said Ford's veto "needlessly jeopardizes a vital sector of our economy. The President's action is all the more surprising in view of the fact that he has recently spoken out so strongly regarding the benefits of tourism to America and to Americans," he declared.

Boone keys Phillies' 7-2 victory

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Bob Boone drove in three runs with a single and a sacrifice fly Wednesday night to lead the Philadelphia Phillies to a 7-2 victory over the San Diego Padres and a sweep of their three-game series.

Wayne Twitchell picked up the victory, his fourth in 10 decisions, with Tug McGraw hurling the last three innings to pick up his fifth save. Randy Jones, 7-3, took the loss.

San Diego took a 2-0 lead in the first. John Grubb singled and moved up on a sacrifice by Enzo Hernandez. After a walk to Dave Winfield, Willie McCovey and Tito Fuentes hit RBI singles.

The Phillies used singles by Mike Schmidt and Ollie Brown and a walk to Dick Allen to set up Boone's two-run single in the first inning. Consecutive home runs by Schmidt, his 10th and fourth in the last three games, and Brown made it 4-2 in the second. The Phillies added a run in the fifth when Dick Allen walked, raced to third on a wild pickoff throw by Jones and scored on Boone's sacrifice fly. Philadelphia scored twice off reliever Bill Grief in the seventh with two walks, a Terry Harmon single and a Bob Tolan throwing error.

The game was delayed in the seventh when Greg Luzinski charged Grief after taking an inside pitch. Grief had hit Dave Cash with a pitch in the sixth inning and had his shirt ripped as both teams scuffled briefly near the mound. No punches landed and no players were ejected.

NEW YORK (UPI) — Ed Kranepool went 3-for-4 Wednesday night and drove in the game's lone run in the first inning as the New York Mets shutout the Houston Astros 1-0 behind the five-hit pitching of southpaw Jerry Koosman.

Kranepool, now batting .412, singled home Felix Millan with two out in the first. Millan had walked with one out and moved to third on Cleon Jones' hit-and-run single. After Houston starter Doug Koniczny struck out Rusty Staub, Kranepool followed with a line drive single to right.

Koosman struck out six and walked three in gaining his fifth win in eight decisions.

The Astros' lone threat came in the third inning when, with one out, Tommy Helms singled and was sacrificed to second by Koniczny. Greg Gross then singled sharply to left but Helms was out at home on a perfect throw from Jones to catcher Jerry Grote.

Dodgers, 3-0

MONTREAL (UPI) — Losing pitcher Dennis Blair wild-pitched two runs home Wednesday night as the Los Angeles Dodgers blanked the Montreal Expos 3-0 behind the eight-hit pitching of Andy Messersmith.

The Dodgers, who were held hitless until they came up with two singles in the eighth inning, scored all their runs in the fifth.

Ron Cey led off the fifth when he was hit by a pitch by Blair, now 2-7. With one out, Rick Auerbach hit into a fielder's choice but Montreal second baseman Larry Lintz dropped the ball and both runners were safe. Messersmith then was walked to load the bases and Cey scored on Blair's first wild pitch.

After Dave Lopes walked to again fill the bases, another wild pitch brought Auerbach home and gave the Dodgers a 2-0 lead. Bill Buckner's sacrifice fly scored Messersmith with the third run.

Pirates, 2-1

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — Richie Hebner's solo fifth inning home run provided the Pittsburgh Pirates with a 2-1 victory over the Cincinnati Reds Wednesday night behind the combined two-hit pitching of Jerry Reuss and two relievers.

Hebner's leadoff homer over the leftfield fence increased the Pirate lead to 2-0 after Pittsburgh had scored in the first on a double by Rennie Stennett, a groundout, and Al Oliver's sacrifice fly.

Reuss had a no-hitter going through six innings when Dave Concepcion led off the seventh with a shot to the mound which struck the Pirate leftfielder below his kneecap, forcing him out of the game. Dave Giusti then came on and after picking off Concepcion, walked pinch-hitter Dan Driessen and gave up a triple to Ken Griffey for the Reds' only run.

O'Brien promises scrutiny of McGinnis, Erving cases

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Commissioner Larry O'Brien of the National Basketball Association promised Wednesday there will be a decision as soon as possible in the cases of American Basketball Association stars Julius Erving and George McGinnis who are embroiled in contract disputes.

O'Brien, after conducting his initial meeting since assuming his new post Sunday, told a news conference Wednesday the first meeting of the board was strictly a business session, but that the agenda for later in the day included reports on Erving, who played briefly for the Atlanta Hawks in pre-season last year before returning to the ABA, and McGinnis, who signed a multi-million dollar contract with the New York Knicks last week.

"There will not be an inordinate delay," the former National Democratic Party chairman and Postmaster General said regarding decisions on the two cases.

"I won't be pinned down as to the time of my decision, but we want to attend to the matter as expeditiously as possible and that's exactly what I intend to do."

The Erving issue was listed on the board's agenda, but the McGinnis matter developed over the weekend.

Thomas' homer, his second of the season, came with one out while Adams, who hit a three-run homer off Cubs' starter Rick Reuschel in the sixth, tagged Oscar Zamora for his second round tripper with two outs in the ninth.

Marc Hill also homered for the Giants, his second, with the bases empty, and Bobby Murcer hit his eighth with a man on, both blows coming in a three-run seventh inning.

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — Reggie Smith tripled home two runs during a three-run eighth inning Wednesday night to give the St. Louis Cardinals a 5-2 victory over the Atlanta Braves.

With the score tied 2-2 going into the Cardinals' half of the eighth, Ted Sizemore laid down a bunt single with one out and Luis Melendez singled. Smith then stroked a liner down the third base line off the wall to score both runners. The Braves pulled starter and loser Ray Sadecki (1-1), in favor of Max Leon, who gave up a single to Ken Reitz, scoring Smith.

The win went to Cardinal starter John Curtis (3-3), who scattered 11 hits and struck out five in 8 1/3 innings.

YMCA girls softball

STROUDSBURG — Patrice Summa and Amy Miller each had five hits and Eileen Mikula and Ralene Molina each had three hits Wednesday as East Stroudsburg Youth Association beat Seaman's Electric, 23-3, in a YMCA girls' softball elementary game. Summa was the winner and gave up three hits, one each by Barbara Tscherne, Kathy Hartmann and Lisa Smiley.

The Shed, 9-6

STROUDSBURG — Chris Howe and Terry Mutchler each had two hits, Debbie Kear was the winning pitcher and The Shed turned over a pair of double plays Wednesday to defeat East Stroudsburg Savings and Loan, 9-6, in YMCA girls' softball elementary action. Patty Smith had three hits and Sherry Palmisano two hits for the loser.

"I anticipate we'll speak directly on the subject (of the McGinnis case) at this afternoon's session," O'Brien said. "I have been looking into all aspects of the case and I am not going to go into specifics as to meetings I have held, discussions that have taken place and requests that I have made for information. That has been ongoing and I expect it will continue."

"I want to formulate a decision by getting every bit of information, evidence and fact that can be garnered. I want to be sure, as far as my participation is concerned, that I have found and determined is the best of my ability."

Three years ago, the Milwaukee Bucks drafted Erving, only to learn the Atlanta Hawks had signed him secretly. Then commissioner Walter Kennedy refused to approve the contract and when the Hawks played Erving during the exhibition season, they were slapped with a $50,000 fine. Later when the Hawks made a deal with the New York Nets returning Erving to the ABA, Milwaukee brought the case to the Board of Governors. Reportedly, the owners are considering a hefty $250,000 fine against the Hawks or awarding some Hawks' draft choices to the Bucks.

Tidrow Medich's remedy as Yanks outlast Twins

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (UPI) — Thurman Munson drove in three runs and raised his average to .346, Wednesday night, lifting the New York Yankees to a 6-3 victory over the Minnesota Twins and giving Doc Medich his fourth win of the season.

Medich struck out five and walked one as he went eight innings allowing five hits. Sparky Lyle took over and was bombed out without retiring a batter in the ninth when the Twins scored two runs on singles by Rod Carew, Tony Oliva and Larry Hise in addition to a walk. Dick Tidrow took over and retired the side.

Carew, baseball's top hitter, had three of the Minnesota hits and raised his average to .413.

Munson nicked starter Bert Blyleven for a two-run home run in the fifth, scoring behind Elliot Maddox who walked. New York added three unearned runs in the sixth. Rick Dempsey was safe on Danny Thompson's throwing error and advanced to third on a sacrifice and a wild pitch. Fred Stanley drove him in on a suicide squeeze bunt which went for a base hit.

Stanley went to second on a passed ball and scored on a Maddox single. The Yankee centerfielder stole second and scored on Munson's base hit.

Dempsey's seventh inning double chased in Graig Nettles who had, walked for the final New York run.

Minnesota scored its first run in the eighth on Craig Kucik's second home run of the year.

Bel could end Schembechler's search for a fullback

Bo Schembechler is searching for a first-string fullback. Stroudsburg's Frank Bell could turn out to be the player he's looking for.

Schembechler, who appeared at the Varsity 'S' Club's athletic awards banquet Monday night, afterwards admitted the fullback spot opened up by the graduation of Chuck Heeter is still very much up for grabs.

"On the basis of spring football we didn't come out with a definite first-string fullback, which means it's going to leave an opportunity for a youngster to really get a shot," Schembechler said.

"My feeling is we'll take a look at Frank early to see if possibly he can help us at that position."

Breaking into the line-up of a Big Ten powerhouse like the University of Michigan won't be easy for a freshman, but Schembechler believes Bell has the potential to do the job.

"I think he's the type of guy who's a smart football player and motivated enough that he can possibly help us right away," Schembechler said.

"Now you're asking an awful lot of a guy to come in there to be a starter at fullback on our football team, but that doesn't mean he couldn't be a strong factor once he gains the experience."

Although both Michigan and Stroudsburg are basically I-formation teams, Bell will find out there's a big difference between high school and college football. How quickly he can make the adjustment will determine his playing status.

Schembechler feels one of the biggest changes will be the size of blocking holes that open up for the backs.

"In high school Frank had some wonderful holes to run through," Schembechler said. "When you get into the classification of football that we play the creases aren't quite as wide. You have to be really hitting the hole and hitting it quickly."

The fact that Bell underwent a knee operation earlier this spring doesn't particularly worry Schembechler.

"It's a cartilage problem and usually those repair very quickly. My experience with that type of a knee injury shows they come back very quickly," Schembechler said.

Michigan will be young

Fullback isn't the only position where Schembechler may end up with young ballplayers. Three-fourths of the offensive backfield and several key positions on defense have been decimated by graduation.

"This will be the youngest team at Michigan in seven years," Schembechler said. "Defensively I look for us to be strong again. Offensively I think it's going to take a little longer to get going."

"If our defense holds up early and then our offense comes along," he added, "I think we'll be right in the race."

Schembechler believes two early season road games against top contenders Wisconsin and Michigan State will be the key to Michigan's Big Ten title hopes.

The Wolverines open at Wisconsin and play three straight non-conference home games against Stanford, Baylor, and Missouri before facing Michigan State.

One-platoon football's ridiculous

Although some collegiate football coaches favor the return of one-platoon football to reduce costs, Schembechler isn't among them.

"It's a ridiculous effort," Schembechler said. "I think it would be the biggest mistake we could make."

"We've been though one-platoon football and found it difficult to compete against the popularity of the professional game," he stated.

"If you're thinking of it in terms of reducing grants it's a farce because most teams that go single platoon will have two fine teams. Teams would recruit the same number of players to have two great teams. You'd have to have a great first and second team."

Schembechler believes single-platoon football would also reduce the game's interest from the spectator's viewpoint.

"The only thing you're doing is making every player learn both offense and defense which restricts the things you can do and makes the game not quite as wide open and spectacular to watch."

Grants may be reduced

Michigan gives 30 grants per year, but must be down to a total of 105 by 1977. Schembechler feels that number is sufficient for his program, but fears he may be forced to cut back by the NCAA.

"I wouldn't be surprised if in August the NCAA reduces it further because of the tremendous financial problems some schools are facing," he said. "I think the program we're on now is sufficient, IF we can keep it."

Burns, Strange, Koch upset in British Amateur

Three U.S. amateurs taste defeat

HOYLAK, England (UPI) — Americans Dick Siderowf, John Grace, Craig Stadler, Vinnie Giles and Jay Haas were the only survivors of the winning Walker Cup team as three seeded Yanks were upset Wednesday in the British Amateur golf championship.

American casualties came thick and fast with Walker Cup ace Gary Koch, Curtis Strange and George Burns suffering the same fate that befell top-seeded U.S. Amateur champion Jerry Pate on Tuesday.

Siderowf, the 1973 winner, is the only American seed left in the competition and he had to rally from a two-hole halfway deficit to beat Scotland's Finlay Black, 2 and 1, for a place in today's fourth round.

The 37-year-old stockbroker from Westport, Conn., had a string of unfortunate experiences on the greens, three putting three times on the 6,979 par-72 Royal Liverpool seaside links.

Siderowf was joined in the fourth round by Walker Cup teammates Grace, the Fort Worth, Tex., realtor who was U.S. Amateur runnerup last year; Giles, the 1972 U.S. Amateur champion; Haas, low amateur in the 1974 U.S. Open, and Stadler, the 1973 U.S. Amateur winner. All except Stadler scored comfortable wins.

Grace overpowered Irishman John Boston 5 and 4; Giles, 32, from Richmond, Va., who's probably a better golfer than the young pros he advises for a living, beat England's Alan Jones 3 and 2 and Haas, 22, from Belleville, Ill., and a member of Wake Forest's 1974 NCAA title team, downed Brian Cudd of Portland, Ore., 4 and 3.

Stadler, the Southern California senior, had to go the full distance, however, to beat Scotland's Bill Hogg by one hole.

The defeat of Burns was the day's biggest upset. The 25 year-old New York soft drink salesman dwarfed his South African opponent Gavin Levenson.

Levenson, the South African stroke play champion, took the short 11th and 13th holes to go two up—a margin he kept to the finish to eliminate Burns, who had been seeded to meet Pate in Saturday's 36-hole final.

Minor victory

STROUDSBURG — David Reed and Brian Ace combined to both pitch and hit the Phillies to a 6-5 Stroudsburg Minor League victory over Burger Chef Wednesday.

Course tightened for Kemper Open

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (UPI) — The $250,000 Kemper Open Golf Tournament, shunned by the three top money winners on the tour, gets underway today on a toughened Quail Hollow Country Club course.

The 7,160-yard layout yielded a record-tying 65 round last year and many golfers shot almost embarrassingly low scores, prompting course officials to make drastic changes for this year's tournament.

Some 300 trees have been added to the course to tighten the fairways and new traps place a premium on accuracy.

While top money winners Jack Nicklaus, Johnny Miller and two-time Kemper Open winner Tom Weiskopf decided not to play in this year's event, there still is a crowd of top contenders on hand.

Lee Trevino, who finished fourth last year and has played well in past Kemper events, will be in the field along with last week's Atlanta Classic winner and defending U.S. Open champion Hale Irwin.

South African Gary Player and always popular Arnold Palmer will also be going after the $50,000 first prize, along with Billy Casper who could have some added incentive for a victory since he failed to qualify Tuesday for this year's U.S. Open.

Bob Menne, winner of the 1974 Kemper in a playoff with Jerry Heard, is also returning to the site of his only tour victory with hopes of getting his game back on track.

"It would be nice to do it again," said Menne. "But the odds are highly against it. Not many successfully defend their championships."

If other course changes aren't enough, the rough on the Quail Hollow course will likely have many players tossing clubs in disgust. The wiry grass is higher than past years.

Four pitchers hurl one-hitter

STROUDSBURG — Mark Kirby, Dave Eden, Neil Anderson, and Jay Smith combined to hurl a one-hitter Wednesday as McGraw Edison downed Exchange, 4-2 in a Twinboro Senior Little League game.

Exchange 000 000 2 2-1-3

Thieves supplying art market

NEW YORK (UPI) — There is at least $100 million worth of stolen art at large in the world and thefts and vandalism are getting worse, according to experts cited by the U. N. Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization.

More than $70,000 worth of art and art objects are stolen every month in Britain alone, according to Scotland Yard.

Roughly 44,000 works of all kinds of art have been stolen in Italy since World War II — 26,000 of them in the last eight years.

Insurance premiums have soared over 200 per cent in the last two years and some strapped museums can afford to cover their collections at only half their value or less.

"The mug who used to rip off a store window to steal an electric toaster is now choosing galleries and antique shops for his target," Det. Robert Volpe,

New York Police Department art identification expert, said.

Not too much attention is paid to the advice of Luciano Ruggerio, art theft expert at the Italian interior ministry.

"Don't bother to steal a masterpiece, you won't be able to sell it and all you will do is damage it."

Against that fact, ransom demands for stolen art works have come into vogue but law officials decry such payments.

"If a child is snatched, the family will do anything to get it back," Rodolfo Siviero, a senior Italian art crime investigator, said. "But there is no such basic emotional attachment to a painting and the state certainly would not — must not — pay ransom."

Recipients of stolen or smuggled art often come by their treasures innocently.

A Raphael portrait was acquired by the Boston Museum of Fine Arts in 1969 but returned to Italy after Italian authorities proved that the painting had been improperly exported. The museum director resigned.

A gold-covered stool was "liberated" by British troops in Africa in 1874. It is a principal symbol of the Ashanti nation and Otumfuo Opoku Ware, the present Ashanti ruler, has asked Britain to return it from the British Museum in London.

In 1972, New York's Metropolitan Museum paid about $1 million for a superb ancient Greek vase, the Euphronios Krater. Italian police contend it was taken illegally from their country. The Metropolitan says it bought the krater legally.

Thomas Hoving, the Metropolitan's director, said he would return the vase if the Italians formally requested it — providing they repay what the museum laid out for it. Art experts doubt that Italian art authorities could raise the required $1 million.

Experts are calling for strict controls over the export of art. William Bostick, administrator of the Detroit Institute of Art, believes it is time for the United States to curb the free export of art.

If there had been such laws, UNESCO experts say, it is unlikely that the late King Farouk of Egypt would have been able to acquire George Washington's sword.

Last February, three Italian Renaissance masterpieces were stolen from the ducal palace at Urbino, Italy. The paintings — "The Flagellation of Christ" and "The Madonna of Senigallia" by Piero Della Francesca and Raphael's "Mute Woman" — are of inestimable value.

If they were market-priced, they might top the $20 million estimate put on the collection stolen from an Irish country house in April, 1974, and considered to be history's biggest art theft.

Last February, Milan's Gallery of Modern Art was stripped of 28 works of 19th and early 20th Century artists worth $5 million. These were recovered but stolen again along with 10 other paintings, this month.

In November, 1973, Italian police recovered 16 paintings worth $3.4 million, including three by Tintoretto, and two men confessed they had stolen them on commission.

The UNESCO report deplores collectors who are indifferent to the origin of their purchases. It cites an unidentified California multimillionaire, said to be one

New trend toward making U.S. high schools relevant

By PATRICIA MCCORMACK
UPI Education Editor

New on the academic trail: A blueprint for turning the nation's high schools into "settings for action and life."

The changes to help "do the best" for the 15.2 million public high school students — including that 25 per cent eventually dropping out — are detailed in a new report.

By the Charles F. Kettering Foundation's Task Force '74, the report is titled: "The Adolescent, Other Citizens and Their High Schools — A Report to the Public and Profession" (McGraw-Hill).

Task Force Chairman Dr. John W. Porter, state superintendent of public instruction, Lansing, Mich., said reform hinges on:

- Citizens and parents becoming more involved in activities of high schools.
- Students being informed of their rights and assured that such rights will be supported.
- Educating for responsibility becoming a primary function of the school itself.
- Alternative programs to the traditional high school being tested and established.

The Task Force acknowledged that recommendations add up to a revolution. And it cautioned:

"... unless many of the problems highlighted in the report receive high priority on our nation's work list, the vitality of our free public educational system will be in jeopardy."

The Task Force concluded that "the democratic foundations of our country will be threatened if solutions to the problems are not found."

Some of the enormous changes from which the high schools cannot be isolated were cited and include:

- "Mass communication, especially television, has destroyed the vitality of local and regional cultures, placing on the school greater burdens of acculturation to a vague, undefinable national ethic."
- "The automobile and the national highway networks have accentuated the rootlessness of an already restless society."
- "Technology has changed people's perception of their relationship to their own work and increasingly separated the home from the job."
- "Affluence has made children, and especially adolescents, consumers on a grand scale and thus subject as individuals to all the pressures of the consumer society."
- "Family ties have weakened everywhere; and the home ... from which students come and to which they must return every evening — has become increasingly unstable and insecure."

Of Task Force suggestions those under "alternate programs" are most interesting. Included:

- Skills Centers. Career-oriented students may spend a portion of the day attending regular high schools and the remaining hours in centers for development of specific job skills.
- Free Schools. These offer an uninhibited open environment in which students may or may not learn. Students are encouraged to establish their own classes and learning environments. "Free schools" focus on flexibility and the student's development of self-reliance, decision-making ability, and responsibility.
- Work-Study Programs. These pivot on cooperation among business, industry, labor unions and schools. Established programs of this type operate in Dallas, Detroit, Boston and Portland, Oregon.

In Boston, for one example, students can select mini-courses taught by volunteer businessmen in construction, accounting, and economics.

They also can learn through on-the-job, nonpaid work experiences offered by businesses. Or they can utilize other resources in the city for off-campus learning.

Seventy-two companies participate and 28 of these release employees to teach courses in the schools — some for limited periods, some for the full year.

If anybody tells you big payload trucks don't get great gas mileage...

TELL'EM TO GO TO DODGE!

The Dodge Boys will sell you the pickups and vans with big payloads and the best fuel economy in the business.

Pound for pound, our Dodge pickups and Tradesman vans have bigger payloads than any competitive models. And recent EPA tests show the standard six-cylinder engines on both these hard-working trucks get 26 mpg in the highway cycle and 16 mpg in the city cycle. That's better fuel economy than you'll find in any conventional pickup or van tested. So if anybody tells you big payload trucks don't get great gas mileage tell 'em to go to Dodge.

Ann Landers

Defends politicians

Dear Ann Landers: My father is the person I love most in all the world. I respect him above all other men. I know he is honest and works long hours for a very unglamorous salary. He is a state senator.

Throughout my high school education (I'm a 16-year-old girl) I have had it drummed into my head that politics is a dirty business and people in government are all corrupt and dishonest. Every time I hear one of my friends, or worse yet, a teacher make this ignorant accusation, I cringe.

Most people don't have the faintest idea of the hard work people in politics do. Just because a few dozen characters in Washington went wrong it doesn't mean politics is dirty and ALL politicians are crooks. Please tell them there are still plenty of decent, respectable men in office. Open their eyes, Ann. Sign me

— Of The People

Dear Friend: I know several extremely fine people in politics in both parties — at every level — city, state and national. I, too, resent the implication that all politicians are crooks. Furthermore, I seriously doubt that there are more rotten eggs in politics than in other fields — medicine, law, business, labor unions, farming, etc. Politicians receive more publicity because what they do makes news.

We mustn't lose sight of the fact that politicians are elected by US — the people. If we put crooks and liars in high places it's our fault when things get loused up. People get the kind of government they deserve.

There is a big difference between cold and cool. Ann Landers shows you how to play it cool without freezing people out in her booklet, "Teen-Age Sex — Ten Ways to Cool It." Send 50 cents in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 1400, Elgin, Illinois 60120.

Goes unnoticed

By Jean Adams

ATTENTION: (Q). Chief lives near me and I really like him a lot. He doesn't go to my school so I don't often see him. What can I do so that he will notice me and maybe even like me as much as I like him?

Please don't tell me to be as nice as I can when I'm around him, because I've already tried.

There are other types of friends available — those who care more for themselves and for other people.

You would be wise to search out this type of friend. They are strong, and will help you to be stronger. The friends you have now are weak.

(Write to Jean Adams, care of The Pocono Record, P. O. Box 2402, Houston, Texas 77001. Every letter is read, but because of the great number received, Jean Adams cannot send personal answers).

Unnoticed in Pennsylvania

(A). Maybe your answer is to arrange to be around Chet more. This would help call attention to the fact that you exist.

Continue to be nice. Being otherwise wouldn't give you the type of friendship you would really want in the long run.

FRIENDS: (Q). All my friends are on drugs. Or nearly all. The ones that aren't smoke. They offer me cigarettes and drugs but I don't accept them. Now no one will hang around with me. They say I'm too much of an angel. I'm seriously thinking of taking drugs myself.

Your Horoscope

ARIES (March 21 to April 20) — Avoid a tendency toward exaggeration and overdramatization of simple events. Try to find a new way to relieve monotony — but make it practical.
TAURUS (April 21 to May 21) — Your Venus, fairly auspicious, stimulates intuition and creativity. You should make good progress if you don't fret over imaginary obstacles.
GEMINI (May 22 to June 21) — Mild stellar influences make this a more or less average day. But YOU can improve it considerably with a little extra effort and verve. Keep trying!
CANCER (June 22 to July 23) — Avoid stress and strain. Take time to analyze situations, probabilities, possibilities. There are many opportunities for the taking.
Leo (July 24 to August 23) — You have the capacity to produce a great deal now, but you could offset it by going off on tangents or wasting time in pointless argument. Care!
VIRGO (August 24 to September 23) — Good influences! Day spells action, determination. Astute planning advised. Give new ventures a "dry run" before actual launching.
LIBRA (September 24 to October 23) — Cut loose from undesirable situations. Try again — from scratch, if need be. Retracing steps can be a revivifying process in certain areas.
SCORPIO (October 24 to November 22) — False statements COULD mislead but, under day's capital influences, you should be able to discriminate well. Just be alert.
SAGITTARIUS (November 23 to December 21) — Put a bit more enthusiasm into efforts. Success can come through new alliances. The "Different," if appropriate, could spark day's happy accomplishment.
CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 20) — This should be a fruitful day, when some of your more vigorous efforts could bring unexpected rewards and recognition. Romance also favored.
AQUARIUS (January 21 to February 19) — Best results will accrue from working with those who have know-how and inspiration to offer. Solo ventures may not be as successful.
PISCES (February 20 to March 20) — Diversity is this day's keyword, but NOT confusion. Neither plan nor act without sound and long-range purpose. Don't let your imagination run out of bounds.
YOU BORN TODAY are highly ingenious, adaptable and gregarious by nature. You have a wealth of talents but may be too impulsive at times, or so restless that you drop projects without giving them time to prove themselves. Your imagination is vivid and you put a touch of originality and finesse to whatever you do. While you are just as creatively inclined as other Gemini's and could make as enviable a success in the worlds of literature, music, the theater or decorating, you, unlike many others of your Sign, have an unusually good business head and are something of a wizard in finances.

Opening lead — queen of hearts.

Sidney Lenz used to tell the story of a hand he played many, many years ago in the days of Auction Bridge. If the bidding seems absurd, it can easily be explained by remembering that in Auction the bidding structure was far different from what it is today in Contract.

In those days a game or slam bonus was awarded whether or not it was bid — provided the number of tricks a declarer took added up to a game or slam. Lengthy bidding sequences were unusual, and opening with a notrump was a very common practice, regardless of distribution.

Lenz (West) led the queen of hearts, disregarding his partner's spade bid. East, after communing with himself at length, signaled with the ten instead of playing the ace on the queen.

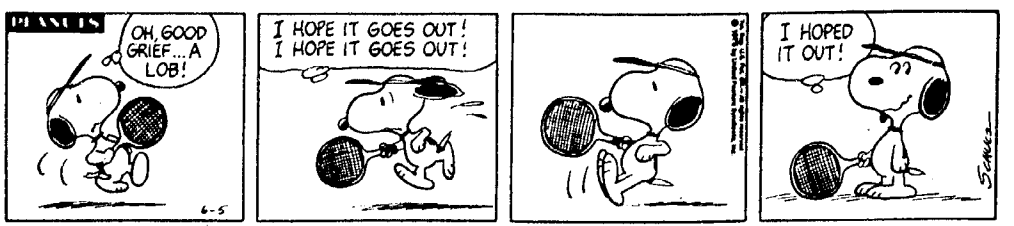

Declarer heaved a long sigh of relief, winning the heart with the king and cashing six diamonds and six clubs to score a grand slam.

East could have turned the result completely around had he come out of his huddle and played the ace of hearts. He would have caught a sizable fish — the king.

With the ten of hearts return by East, Lenz could overtake with the jack and play a low heart, forcing East to take the lead with the seven.

East's queen of spades return would allow Lenz to cash his hearts and return a spade, whereupon East would run his spades and the defenders would score 13 tricks.

You don't often see a hand where a defender's misplay costs his side 26 tricks — but, for whatever it's worth, this is one example of how the deed is done. It is a feat utterly unworthy of emulation.

Going the 'full employment' way — definition first

By CHARLES E. FLINNER
WASHINGTON (UPI) — Motherhood, apple pie and peace have taken a back seat recently to "full employment."

Full employment pretty much defies definition and attaining that goal, however defined, seems to have plunged the Congress, the administration and organized labor into a multilateral monologue.

A close inspection of some of the chatter does signal a faint common thread that could link these diverse forces into a common policy—maybe.

As for Labor Secretary John T. Dunlop, "full employment" by itself may not even matter. Dunlop seeks "sustainable expansion that leads to stable high employment and not a peak that explodes in more inflation and collapse."

George Meany, the high school dropout who sits atop the pinnacle of the 13.5 million member AFL-CIO, is from the "jobs now" school. He wants to hire the unemployed and to print the money to pay them, if necessary, because eventually they will pay taxes that will enable the repayment of the borrowing.

Then there is the Hubert Humphrey and Jacob Javits school in Congress. These senior citizens of the Senate are weary of bumping along from crisis to crisis, inflation, recession, energy crunch.

"Our economic problems are interrelated and cannot be dealt with in an isolated and uncoordinated way," said Humphrey, calling for long range government planning.

"Government intervention and involvement in the economy is here to stay," said Javits, a cosponsor to the planning bill.

Into this intriguing triangle could fit neatly a government investment role.

Indeed, Meany has that in mind when he suggests railroad roadbed and track repair.

Meany also is receptive to a Reconstruction Finance Corp., a government agency which accumulates and invests capital on the basis of needs as seen by the government.

Dunlop appears to have sided with Treasury Secretary William E. Simon in fretting about where to get the capital to overcome shortages of productive capacity in certain parts of the economy.

If the government goes into hock, in order to hire the unemployed, where will the electric utilities, for example, get the money to build their power plants.

The electric utilities example is no accident for that is exactly what Dunlop has had in mind in recent days.

Dunlop told a joint economic subcommittee recently that a boom will bring America to bottlenecks that lurk ahead and "production interruptions may mean employment interruptions."

"Electrical utilities are central to any analysis," he said. "The lack of adequate power means less industrial expansion and fewer jobs in the long run."

"Not only does the placement of utilities create jobs in the industries that provide the machinery, equipment and services for utilities, but new utilities mean both construction jobs and new permanent jobs," he said.

The carrot is higher-quality jobs and more of them. The stick is unemployment and shortages of electricity and other basic production essential to sustained growth.

And into that formula Humphrey, Javits and Meany could work to thrust the U.S. Treasury, through either large sums to be invested by an RFC-type thing or a small deficit which will leave spare capital for private investors, subject to a national debate about what the role of government should be.

FUE

An already fine road car gets added vigor.

A surface glance at these new, speeded-up Quads won't tell you about what's so special about them. But pop the bonnet on one, and the is evident.

The conventional air cleaner is replaced by a cavernous cast-iron box. It filters copien outside air and feeds it into the induction system. And the carburetor? Don't look for it, replaced by a highly sophisticated Bosch electronic fuel injection system. An electronic control unit (actually a miniature on-board computer) accu-meters just a precise amount of fuel which is delivered directly to the inject valves. (See diagram.)

What all this promotes is the 15-hp, can-in-hand powerplant is efficiency. While maintaining good economy, there's an increase in horsepower, an increase in torque and, what's hard to say, a decrease in exhaust pollutants.

Opel underway.

First and foremost, an Opel is a road car. So take care there. Take the thick, vinyl-covered steering wheel firmly in hand and run a Manta, Sportwagon or 1900 Sedan through your own, personal test.

To begin, simply turn the key. No need to depress the throttle, as the four computer-controlled injection nozzles will spend the proper amount of fuel to the cylinders without the help of your right foot.

Once underway, Opel's rack-and-pinion steering will help guide you gracefully through traffic, around curves and obstacles—the way you'd expect of a fine road car.

As you proceed, notice the great visibility. Opel's glass area is most generous: the windows tall. Ahh, how pleasant the passing scenery looks.

Upshifting downshifting, you begin to sense the split personality of this car. It's practical, economical, a commuter's delight. But equally capable once the weekend gymkhana and rainy season comes around—as the proud owner of the night will attest.

The inner workings.

There's more to the '76 Opel than fuel injection. The front disc brakes are better, the disc measuring 9.6 inches in diameter. Coupled with them, and the drum brakes in the rear, is a larger power booster that further aids stopping.

To complement the bigger brakes we've redesigned Opel's road wheels so there are eight cooling slots instead of the previous four. And wrapped around these new, wider wheels are 165 SR x 13 steel belted radial tires, now standard.

Something that also merits mention is Opel's suspension system. It has not been changed. And if you've driven an Opel you know why. The four shock absorbers, the four coil springs, the "Panhard" rod, the front and rear

The cockpit.
Inside there many nice things happen. The rewards of human engineering abound. Take note of the bucket seats. They're shaped to hug the human contour. The sides of the seats are built up to help support you through turns. The newly designed road restraints adjust to your preference. The total effect is not unlike a wrapped back chair. (And, incidentally, the front seat back's recline works, too.)

On instrumentation is good should be bold, legible large white markings on a black background, and arranged to give the driver quick information about vehicle speed, fuel level, etc.

And, naturally, control switches are labeled with international markings.

Inca princess stars in movies

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Barbara Carrera has the look and carriage of an Inca princess and, like many an international beauty, she is intent on becoming a movie star.

Barbara is unique in one respect. She is the first native Nicaraguan to attain star status in the movies.

Although she hasn't been seen on the screen yet, Barbara costars with Rock Hudson in "Embryo." She recently completed Tom Laughlin's "The Master Gunfighter."

Barbara's eyes are almond shaped. Her hair is jet black. And she is as slender as a reed.

No empty-headed little starlet, the Latin American beauty has worked in most civilized countries around the world as a high fashion model. She speaks five languages.

"I believe I'm the first Nicaraguan to work in Hollywood films," she said. "My country is very small. Most people in the world don't even know where Nicaragua is."

"But everybody knows the old Andrews Sisters song, 'Managua, Nicaragua, Is A Wonderful Place.' It's our national claim to fame."

"I learned to sing it in Spanish as a child. We all did. I was surprised when I came to the United States to find it was known in this country. I had no idea it all began here."

Barbara hopes to break the old pepperpot image Hollywood has forced on Latin American performers since Lupe Velez and Carmen Miranda. She is also aware she isn't right for Julie Andrews' roles either.

"In these first two pictures I play a girl, not a Latin girl. I'm not given any nationality," she said in an accent that defies analysis.

"I was offered a role with Marlon Brando and Jack Nicholson in 'Missouri Breaks.' It was an apple pie American girl in the west. I don't think I can play that part."

Barbara broke into modeling in New York by telling everyone she was a native of Spain. She knew European models were the rage. Latin Americans — due to prejudices against Puerto Ricans — were personae non grata.

"It was a big lie," she said. "But being Spanish got me my first job. The lie grew. Now most people in the modeling world are convinced I'm from Madrid, not Managua."

Barbara said she left Nicaragua at age 10. She was educated in a Memphis, Tenn., convent. She hasn't been back to her native land since.

"I love Nicaragua," she said. "It is a tropical paradise that hasn't been discovered by tourists yet. It is very primitive in some areas. Someday I will go back as a movie star."

"When I was 8 years old I told my playmates someday I would be an actress. And now that is coming true."

Barbara has been a house guest of actor George Hamilton and his wife, Alana. She recently found an apartment of her own.

"It's the same apartment Marilyn Monroe lived in when she became a star," Barbara said. "I didn't know it had been hers until I moved in. But the place has good karma. I liked it right away."

Barbara hopes the karma will rub off.

Wyckoff's Wyckoff Shopper

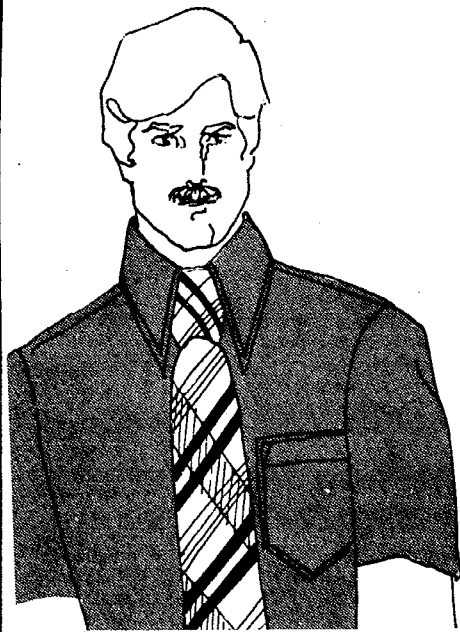

June rhymes with moon . . . and love goes with marriage and it's the month for both! There's a parallel between roses and marriage. The promise of both is usually extolled in lavish style . . . roses on the pages of garden catalogues; marriage, in the romantic terms of fiction and films. Did you ever notice that the nursery catalogues show the perfect rose . . . every color pulsating, every petal exquisite, every description heady with lures like "easy to grow," "velvety," "coppery orange, heavily flushed with red." But somewhere in the back of the book, they tell you what to order for black spot and thrips! Rarely do they tell you about the pruning, mulching, feeding . . . nor do they warn you about the pricks from the thorns!

It is the same with marriage . . . the sentimental concept portrays marriage as "ever blooming," a hybrid of Peace . . . Golden Rapture, etc, etc, etc! Blight seems improbable, spade work incidental. What really happens? June comes and roses flower . . . marriages take place and the reality is a miracle. It doesn't seem to matter that there was more from bush to bloom than there seemed to be. For no marriage (and hardly ANY rose) gets its beauty without care from the people who want it to flourish.

Wyckoff's in their 100 years have watched thousands of marriages "flower," and have observed the "tender loving care" with which family and friends have launched the "loveboat" onto the "sea of matrimony!" It is one of the happiest of times for families and we are grateful for having shared your joy! Our JUNE JUBILEE SALE is perfectly times to present the bride and groom with famous name brand gifts at "perfect as a catalogue rose" prices! May we invite you to visit our NEW Plaza Shop Home Center and see the savings on a special group of Quozel Lamps . . . Frigidaire washers, dryers, and air conditioners . . . Hitachi Digital AM-FM and Digital Clock radios . . . Kenwood Stereo Systems . . . and Hitachi black and white and color televisions!!

Our lower level is a veritable "garden" of "perennial favorites" in the wedding gift department . . . and the savings are blooming profusely on Hoover's Blender, Steam Iron and Toaster . . . a dandy rustproof Electric Char-B-Que that gives you charcoal flavor without the charcoal . . . powerful Eureka Upright Cleaners and a "field full" of Fieldcrest fresh Daisy Print Wondercale sheets!!!!

JUNE . . . Moon . . . Love . . . Marriage . . . Wyckoff's!!!! Like the song says . . . "You can't have one without the other!!!!!!" We'll be so happy to help you make your bride the "happiest the sun shines on!!!! Start by visiting us today at Wyckoff's in Stroudsburg!!!!
